STATEMENT OF RELATED CASES

Pursuant to Rule 47.5 of this Court's Rules, counsel for respondent-appellant states that he is unaware of any other appeal from this civil action that has previously been before this Court or any other appellate court under the same or similar title. Respondent-appellant's counsel also states that he is unaware of any case pending in this or any other court that may directly affect or be directly affected by this Court's decision in this case.

STATEMENT OF JURISDICTION

On September 9, 2019, the United States Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims (Veterans Court) granted a petition for a writ of mandamus on behalf of a class to invalidate 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5) and require VA to readjudicate claims for reimbursement of certain out-of-pocket medical expenses under 38 U.S.C. § 1725. Appx1-41. On April 15, 2020, the Veterans Court issued final judgment. Appx42. This Court has jurisdiction over this appeal of a Veterans Court decision certifying a class and granting a petition for a writ of mandamus under 38 U.S.C. § 7292(a), (c).

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUES

Congress directed the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) to reimburse certain out-of-pocket expenses that veterans participating in VA's healthcare system incur obtaining emergency treatment at non-VA healthcare facilities for non-service-connected conditions. Congress also directed VA to "delineate the circumstances under which such payments may be made" and prohibited VA from reimbursing "any copayment or similar payment a veteran owes under a health-care plan contract" for such care. 38 U.S.C. § 1725(c)(1)(B), (4)(D). VA's implementing regulations state, in part, that VA will not reimburse "any copayment, deductible, coinsurance, or similar payment that a veteran owes the third party or is obligated to pay under a health-plan contract." 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5). Under this regulation, VA denied a claim for reimbursement of a coinsurance expense that resulted from treatment petitioner-appellee, Amanda Wolfe, received in 2016. Ms. Wolfe initiated an appeal to the Board of Veterans' Appeals (board). But instead of waiting for the board to decide her appeal, Ms. Wolfe immediately petitioned the Veterans Court for a writ of mandamus on behalf of a class of claimants to invalidate § 17.1005(a)(5) and require VA to readjudicate and grant claims for reimbursement of coinsurance and deductibles.

In the decision precipitating this appeal, the Veterans Court (1) certified a class of claimants with claims for coinsurance and deductibles that VA has denied or will deny, (2) issued a writ that invalidated § 17.1005(a)(5), and (3) required VA to readjudicate and grant claims for coinsurance and deductibles, leading to these issues on appeal:

1. Whether the Veterans Court erred when it issued a writ of mandamus that did not aid its exercise of actual or prospective jurisdiction.

2. Whether the Veterans Court erred when it issued a writ of mandamus that expanded its jurisdiction.

3. Whether the Veterans Court erred when it held that Ms. Wolfe was entitled to a writ of mandamus because she (1) did not have adequate alternative means to obtain her desired relief and (2) had a clear and indisputable right to the writ.

4. Whether the Veterans Court erred when it certified a class that includes claims over which the court lacks jurisdiction.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE SETTING OUT RELEVANT FACTS

I. Nature Of The Case

Respondent-appellant Robert L. Wilkie, Secretary of Veterans Affairs, appeals the decision of the Veterans Court in Wolfe v. Wilkie, 32 Vet. App. 1 (2019) (Appx1-41), which granted a petition for a writ of mandamus filed by Ms. Wolfe on behalf of a class of claimants to invalidate 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5) and require VA to readjudicate and grant claims for reimbursement of coinsurance and deductibles.¹

II. Statement Of Facts And Course Of Proceedings Below

A. Statutory And Regulatory History

Congress added § 1725 to title 38 of the United States Code in the Veterans Millennium Health Care and Benefits Act, Pub. L. No. 106-117, 113 Stat. 1545 (1999) (providing an effective date of May 29, 2000). Section 1725 directed VA to reimburse certain veterans enrolled in the VA healthcare system for expenses incurred in obtaining emergency treatment for non-service-connected conditions at non-VA facilities if certain conditions were met.² As relevant here, two of those conditions were that the veteran (1) must have been “personally liable” for the costs, meaning they had “no entitlement to care or services under a health-plan contract,” 38 U.S.C. § 1725(b)(3)(B) (1999), and (2) must have had “no other contractual or legal recourse against a third party that would, in part or in whole, extinguish such liability to the provider.” Id. § 1725(b)(3)(C) (1999).

² Although the decision on appeal does not discuss claims for direct payment, Congress also authorized VA to directly pay healthcare providers for out-of-pocket expenses incurred by participating veterans, and in practice, most claims to VA under § 1725, including the initial claim for Ms. Wolfe’s coinsurance, are submitted by healthcare providers—not veterans. 38 U.S.C. § 1725(a)(2). Payment by VA to a provider “extinguish[es] any liability on the part of the veteran for that treatment.” Id. § 1725(c)(3).

Congress gave VA broad authority to implement the statute's provisions. Congress worried about the statute's impact on VA's budget, and expected VA to exercise its regulatory authority to limit costs. H.R. Rep. No. 106-237, at 38-39 (1999). Congress in particular directed VA to promulgate regulations that "establish the maximum amount payable" and "delineate the circumstances under which such payments may be made" 38 U.S.C. § 1725(c)(1)(A) and (B). VA's regulations, which took effect in May 2003, set forth substantive conditions for reimbursement. 38 C.F.R. §§ 17.1000-17.1008; see 38 Fed. Reg. 3401-01 (Jan. 24, 2003).

Under 38 C.F.R. § 17.1002, as originally issued, VA would reimburse emergency treatment expenses only if "all" of nine conditions were met. 38 C.F.R. § 17.1002(a)-(i) (2002). Among those conditions was that the veteran had "no coverage under a health-plan contract for payment or reimbursement, in whole or in part, for the emergency treatment[.]" 38 C.F.R. § 17.1002(g) (effective until Jan. 19, 2012) (emphasis added), renumbered as 38 C.F.R. § 17.1002(f) (effective 2012). As VA explained in the Federal Register notice accompanying its interim rule, § 1725 authorized payment to "veterans who have no health care insurance or other source of payment in whole or in part." 66 Fed. Reg. 36467, 36468 (Jul. 12, 2001).

In 2010, Congress made three changes to § 1725. See Emergency Care Fairness Act of 2010, Pub. L. No. 111-137, 123 Stat. 3495 (effective Feb. 1, 2010) (ECFA). First, Congress struck the phrase “in part” in § 1725(b)(3)(C), meaning that reimbursement is precluded only where a veteran has “other contractual or legal recourse against a third party that would, in whole, extinguish such liability to the provider[.]” 38 U.S.C. § 1725(b)(3)(C). Second, Congress struck a provision that defined “health-plan contract” to include state-mandated automobile insurance policies. Id. § 1725(f)(3)(E). Third, Congress added a new subsection (4) to § 1725(c) to address VA’s reimbursement responsibility when a veteran has contractual or legal recourse against a third party, including a new subpart (D), which prohibits VA from reimbursing “a veteran under this section for any copayment or similar payment that the veteran owes the third party or for which the veteran is responsible under a health-plan contract.”

Following the ECFA, VA revised its regulations so that reimbursement was unavailable if a third party would extinguish a veteran’s entire liability. See 38 C.F.R. § 17.1002(g) (2012); 77 Fed. Reg. 23615-16 (Apr. 20, 2012). Reflecting this change, as well as the new limitations on reimbursement added to § 1725(c), VA added 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(f), which stated that “VA will not reimburse a claimant under this section for any deductible, copayment, or similar payment that the veteran owes a third party.” Id. § 17.1005(f) (2012). This provision did not address payments owed under a health-plan contract because VA continued to interpret § 1725 as barring reimbursement where a veteran had any coverage under such a contract.

In Staab v. McDonald, 28 Vet. App. 50 (2016), the Veterans Court held that VA's reading of the ECFA was incorrect, and that Congress intended VA to reimburse veterans with partial coverage under a health-plan contract. In particular, the court held that the ECFA removed the bar on reimbursements to veterans with partial coverage from a third party or under a health-plan contract in light of the description of personal liability in 38 U.S.C. § 1725(b)(3)(B) and the inclusion of health-plan contracts, including Medicare, in the category of "third party." Staab, 28 Vet. App. at 54 (citing 38 U.S.C. § 1725(c)(4) and (f)(3)).

VA revised its regulations following Staab. See 83 Fed. Reg. 974 (Jan. 9, 2018). As relevant here, VA revised § 17.1002(f) so that veterans may be eligible for reimbursement even if they have partial coverage under a health-plan contract. VA also revised § 17.1005's payment limitation provisions to clarify that it would not reimburse "any copayment, deductible, coinsurance, or similar payment that [a] veteran . . . is obligated to pay under a health-plan contract." 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5). VA explained that it "does not have authority to reimburse copayments or similar payment the veteran owes under a health-plan contract." 83 Fed. Reg. at 975.

B. Ms. Wolfe's Claim History And Mandamus Petition

Ms. Wolfe obtained emergency treatment at Mercy Medical Center, a non-VA healthcare facility in Iowa, in September 2016. Appx143. Ms. Wolfe's employee-sponsored health plan provided benefits covering most of her hospital bill, but did not cover a $202.93 copayment and $2,354.41 coinsurance obligation. Id.; Appx10. Mercy Medical Center submitted a claim to VA for payment of these expenses. See Appx199.³

VA denied the claim in February 2018 and notified Ms. Wolfe, explaining that § 17.1005(a)(5) prohibits reimbursement of copayments and coinsurance. Appx144; Appx199-200. Ms. Wolfe filed a Notice of Disagreement (NOD) in July 2018. Appx205-06. Rather than wait for a response to her NOD, however, Ms. Wolfe petitioned for a writ of mandamus from the Veterans Court on October 30, 2018, which she amended on January 1, 2019, seeking to (1) certify a class of similarly situated claimants, (2) invalidate § 17.1005(a)(5), and (3) require VA to ³ Although Appx199 is a letter is from VA to Ms. Wolfe, its reference to a "UB Claim ID#" shows that the initial claim was submitted by the healthcare provider because UB claim forms are standard forms used by hospitals and other healthcare providers when submitting bills to third-party payers for reimbursement of health services. See 38 C.F.R. § 17.1004(b); see also Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Medicare Billing: Form CMS-1450 and the 837 Institutional (June 2018), at 3 (available at <https://www.cms.gov/Outreach-and-Education/Medicare-Learning-Network-MLN/MLNProducts/Downloads/837I-FormCMS-1450-ICN006926.pdf>).

C. The Veterans Court’s Mandamus Decision

In a September 9, 2019 order, the majority of a three-judge panel certified Ms. Wolfe’s requested class and granted the petition. Appx1-41. The majority recognized that the Veterans Court’s authority under the All Writs Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a) (AWA), applies only when it “would otherwise ‘be prevented or frustrated from exercising [its] statutorily granted jurisdiction over a Board decision[.]’” Appx16 (citing In re Fee Agreement of Wick, 40 F.3d 367, 373 (Fed. Cir. 1994)). Nevertheless, and despite Ms. Wolfe conceding in her petition that she was actively pursuing board review of her claim, see Appx144 n.2; Appx40 (Falvey, J.), the majority determined that mandamus was appropriate because § 17.1005(a)(5) “stops otherwise potentially meritorious appeals from progressing through the system.”⁵ Appx17. The majority thus concluded that invalidating

⁴ The Veterans Court considered Ms. Wolfe’s petition with a petition from Peter Boerschinger, which sought, in part, to require VA to provide notice to veterans stating that having health insurance does not bar reimbursement. Appx13-15. The court dismissed Mr. Boerschinger’s petition as moot because VA “has provided, or is in the process of providing, the proposed Boerschinger Class all of its requested relief.” Appx14. Mr. Boerschinger has not appealed dismissal of his petition, nor do we.

§ 17.1005(a)(5) would aid the court's exercise of jurisdiction, and rejected VA's contention that its regulation does not prevent veterans from obtaining Veterans Court review, like circumstances involving agency delay or inaction.

The majority likewise disagreed with VA's contention that the court lacked authority to directly review and invalidate regulations under the AWA because the court's jurisdictional statute, 38 U.S.C. § 7252(a), limits the court's jurisdiction to reviewing board decisions. Appx18-19. The majority held instead that 38 U.S.C. § 7261, which establishes the scope of the court's review of board decisions, independently authorizes the court to review VA regulations even when it is not reviewing a board decision under § 7252(a). Id. And the majority determined that 38 U.S.C. § 502 poses no impediment to the court's direct review of regulations under the AWA. Id.

The court then held that the proposed class met the requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23, which the court noted in Monk v. Wilkie, 30 Vet. App. 167, 170 (2018), would guide the court's consideration of requests for class certification.⁶ Appx19-28. As relevant to this appeal, the majority did not address whether the court had jurisdiction over all the claims in the class. See generally id.

VGqc&feature=youtu.be>. And before the court issued its decision, Ms. Wolfe perfected her appeal to the board. See 38 U.S.C. § 7105 (2016); 38 C.F.R. § 19.2(c). Neither party appended the Statement of the Case or Ms. Wolfe's Form 9, through which she perfected her appeal, as exhibits to a filing in the Veterans Court. The documents are not, as a result, part of the record on appeal. If the Court would like to see the documents, however, we will submit copies.

Finally moving to the merits, the court held that Ms. Wolfe satisfied the three-part test for the issuance of a writ. Appx28-34 (citing Cheney v. U.S. Dist. Ct. for D.C., 542 U.S. 367, 380-81 (2004)).

First, the court held that Ms. Wolfe had a clear and indisputable right to the writ. The majority rejected § 17.1005(a)(5) as “inconsistent with Staab’s interpretation of section 1725,” and because “deductibles and coinsurance aren’t ‘similar’ to a copayment (and VA didn’t explain—to defeat arbitrariness—how they’re ‘similar’ to a copayment).” Appx29. The majority explained that § 17.1005(a)(5) conflicts with Staab by “eliminat[ing] in effect any potentially reimbursable, remaining liability for veterans who have partial coverage from a health-plan contract.” Appx31. And, whereas VA considered deductibles and coinsurance qualitatively similar to copayments because they are common cost-sharing mechanisms in health plan contracts, the majority concluded that § 1725(c)(4)(D) can only be read to prohibit reimbursement of expenses that are quantitatively similar to copayments, meaning “similar in amount and a fixed nature.” Appx32 n.223.

Second, the court held that Ms. Wolfe lacked adequate alternative means through which to obtain her desired relief. Appx33-34. Despite her ongoing pursuit of a board decision, the majority stated that requiring Ms. Wolfe to follow title 38's appeals process would amount to a "useless act." Id. This is so, the majority explained, because "practical futility . . . can make a formal remedy insufficient," and pursuing relief from the board is "futile if the agency will almost certainly deny any relief . . . because it . . . lacks jurisdiction over[] the matter." Id. (citations omitted). By characterizing board appeals as useless because the board cannot invalidate VA regulations, the majority rejected VA's contention that Ms. Wolfe had adequate alternative means to obtain her desired relief through title 38's appeals process. Id. Finally, the court held that mandamus was appropriate under the circumstances. Appx34.

The court thus (1) invalidated § 17.1005(a)(5), (2) invalidated VA decisions made under § 17.1005(a)(5) if they denied reimbursement of deductibles or coinsurance, (3) ordered VA to readjudicate claims from Wolfe Class members "under section 1725's proper interpretation," and (4) ordered VA to stop sending certain notices to veterans and to propose a plan for providing corrected notices. Appx36.

Judge Falvey dissented. Appx36-41. To start, Judge Falvey explained that the Veterans Court "may grant a petition for writ of mandamus when the relief sought has some sort of relationship to a final Board decision over which we could exercise jurisdiction.” Appx37-38 (citing Cox v. West, 149 F.3d 1360, 1364-66 (Fed. Cir. 1998)). In this case, however, “[b]ecause granting Ms. Wolfe’s petition could not lead to a final Board decision reviewable by this Court, and would, in fact, abrogate the need for such a decision,” Judge Falvey explained that “her requests for relief are not in aid of our jurisdiction, and her petition must be denied.” Appx38 (citing Am. Legion v. Nicholson, 21 Vet. App. 1, 7 (2007) and Yi v. Principi, 15 Vet. App. 265, 267 (2001)).

Judge Falvey also disagreed with the holding that Ms. Wolfe had a clear and indisputable right to the writ. Appx40. In particular, he explained that VA “makes a good argument that the amended § 17.1005(a)(5) is a permissible construction of section 1725.” Id. “At the very least,” Judge Falvey concluded, “the Secretary’s reasoned and persuasive statutory-interpretation argument shows that the invalidity of § 17.1005(a)(5) is not a foregone conclusion.” Id.

Finally, Judge Falvey disagreed with the majority’s disregard for the adequacy of title 38’s appeals process to provide Ms. Wolfe with alternative means to obtain her desired relief. Appx40-41. He explained that, by directly deciding the merits of Ms. Wolfe’s claim rather than requiring her to follow title 38’s process, the majority was substituting mandamus for the statutory appeals process prescribed by Congress. Id. ““Where the appeal statutes establish the conditions of appellate review an appellate court cannot rightly exercise its discretion to issue a writ whose only effect would be to avoid those conditions.” Id. (quoting Roche v. Evaporated Milk Ass’n, 319 U.S. 21, 30 (1943)). And Judge Falvey corrected the majority’s conclusion that it was “useless” for Ms. Wolfe’s claim to be subject to a board decision: “a Board decision addressing veterans’ claims could find facts in the first instance and develop a record that the Court could base its review on.” Id. (citing 38 U.S.C. § 7252(b) and Hensley v. West, 212 F.3d 1255, 1263 (Fed. Cir. 2000)).

Judge Falvey concluded: “Because Ms. Wolfe’s petition is not in aid of our jurisdiction, she lacks an indisputable right to a writ, and there are adequate alternative means to obtain her desired relief, she does not meet the criteria for issuance of a writ of mandamus.” Id.

D. Post-Mandamus Proceedings

After granting the petition, the Veterans Court kept jurisdiction over the case and ordered VA to begin implementing the writ. See, e.g., Appx750-51; Appx787-90. The court denied VA’s October 24, 2019 motion to stay the precedential effect of its decision (Appx534-544) and request to certify the writ for interlocutory appeal (Appx523-33), and demurred in the face of VA’s request for entry of final judgment (id.).⁷ See Appx712-714; Appx715-16. The court thus deprived VA of its 38 U.S.C. § 7292(a) right to appeal until VA set a date certain when it would begin readjudicating the Wolfe Class's claims. See Appx716; Appx790. Only then, after more than seven months, did the Veterans Court finally enter final judgment and permit VA to appeal. Appx42. This appeal followed.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

The Veterans Court made multiple, independent legal errors when it granted Ms. Wolfe's petition. First, although the AWA authorizes courts to issue writs of mandamus that aid in their exercise of jurisdiction, the writ here did not. Ms. Wolfe never asserted that anything was preventing her from obtaining Veterans Court review. If Ms. Wolfe had simply followed the appeals process laid out by Congress in title 38, she could have obtained Veterans Court consideration of her challenge to § 17.1005(a)(5). Mandamus was not appropriate.

Second, the writ impermissibly expanded the Veterans Court's jurisdiction. Congress vested exclusive jurisdiction over direct challenges to VA regulations in ⁷ In addition, two months after the court granted Ms. Wolfe's petition, but five months before the court would enter final judgment, the board granted Ms. Wolfe's claim under the dictates of the writ. Appx717-729. Although the board's decision may effectively deprive Ms. Wolfe of a personal stake in the outcome of this case, VA has not yet made payment on the claim and reversal of the writ could permit VA to recoup any payments made pursuant to the writ. See 38 C.F.R. § 1.911. In any event, even if Ms. Wolfe no longer has a personal stake, this case is not moot. See Franks v. Bowman Transp. Co., Inc., 424 U.S. 747, 753-756 (1976).

this Court and gave the Veterans Court jurisdiction to review board decisions, including review of VA regulations as applied in those decisions. Despite these clear jurisdictional boundaries, the Veterans Court held that it also has jurisdiction over direct regulatory challenges when they are presented in mandamus petitions. This is contrary to title 38, and thus conflicts with well-settled precedent that courts may not use the AWA to expand their jurisdiction.

Third, the writ impermissibly expanded the Veterans Court jurisdiction to initial VA decisions. Congress vested exclusive jurisdiction to review initial VA decisions in the board. Thus, when the Veterans Court decided the merits of Ms. Wolfe's claim, which was not yet subject to a board decision, it seized the board's jurisdiction. Although courts may protect their prospective jurisdiction under the AWA, that authority obtains only when a writ facilitates the court's future review. That did not happen here. Instead, by directly deciding the merits of Ms. Wolfe's claim, the writ effectively eliminated the need for her to secure a board decision for appeal to the Veterans Court. As a result, the writ thwarted the court's jurisdiction.

Fourth, the Veterans Court erred when it held that title 38 did not provide Ms. Wolfe with adequate alternative means to obtain her desired relief. The majority reached this curious result by judging the adequacy of title 38's appeals process solely on Ms. Wolfe's chance of success before the board. As explained below, however, title 38 provides claimants with adequate alternative means to obtain reimbursement under § 1725 even when their chance of success before the board is low. As the Court is well aware, title 38 provides much more than board review—it provides for multiple layers of judicial review as well. Thus, even if the board would have denied Ms. Wolfe’s claim, its adverse decision would have triggered the Veterans Court’s § 7252(a) jurisdiction, which is the point of the mandamus in the first place.

Fifth, the Veterans Court erred when it held that Ms. Wolfe had a clear and indisputable right to the writ. The majority ignored Congress’s delegation of authority to VA to delineate the terms of reimbursement and misinterpreted Congress’s prohibition on VA reimbursing any “copayment or similar payment[.]” Copayments, deductibles, and coinsurance are common “cost sharing” mechanisms through which health plan enrollees contribute to healthcare providers’ charges, and are thus undeniably “similar.” Regardless of the court’s reason for reaching a different (incorrect) statutory construction, therefore, VA’s regulation was both a valid exercise of its delegated authority and reasonable.

Finally, the majority improperly included in the Wolfe Class (1) claimants with claims subject to a decision that is final and no longer appealable, (2) claimants with claims that have not yet been subject to a board decision, and (3) claimants with claims for reimbursement of deductibles. Courts may only certify class actions that include claims within their jurisdiction, yet the Veterans Court here did not even analyze whether it has jurisdiction over every claim in the Wolfe Class. In fact, the court lacks jurisdiction over claims within these three categories, and thus erred when it included them in the Wolfe Class.

For each and any of these reasons, the Court should reverse.

ARGUMENT

I. Jurisdiction And Standard Of Review

The Court may review Veterans Court “ruling[s] on mandamus petitions.” Lamb v. Principi, 284 F.3d 1378, 1381 (Fed. Cir. 2002); see Beasley v. Shinseki, 709 F.3d 1154, 1157 (Fed. Cir. 2013). The Court “may not review the factual merits of the veteran’s claim,” but may review “non-frivolous legal question[s]” and “may determine whether the petitioner has satisfied the legal standard for issuing the writ,” including the evaluation of “whether a petitioner has an adequate alternative remedy.” Id. at 1157-58. Review of the Veterans Court’s decision on a petition for writ of mandamus is for an abuse of discretion. Lamb, 284 F.3d at 1384. A “court by definition abuses its discretion when it makes an error of law.” Koon v. United States, 518 U.S. 81, 100 (1996).

II. The Writ Did Not Aid The Court’s Exercise Of Jurisdiction

“It is well established that the AWA does not expand a court’s jurisdiction”; it “provides for the issuance of writs ‘in aid of’ the jurisdiction already possessed by a court.” Cox, 149 F.3d at 1363; Clinton v. Goldsmith, 526 U.S. 529, 534-35

(1999). Petitioners thus have “the burden of showing . . . that the action sought by mandamus is within the court’s statutorily defined subject matter jurisdiction.” In re Wick, 40 F.3d at 372-73 (citations omitted); see Baker Perkins, Inc. v. Werner & Pfleiderer Corp., 710 F.2d 1561, 1565 (Fed. Cir. 1983). Ms. Wolfe did not, and could not, make that showing here.

Created by statute, the Veterans Court has “no jurisdiction but such as the statute confers.” Christianson v. Colt Indus. Operating Corp., 486 U.S. 800, 818 (1988). The court’s jurisdiction is thus defined by § 7252(a), which authorizes it to “review decisions of the Board of Veterans’ Appeals.” Ledford v. West, 136 F.3d 776, 779 (Fed. Cir. 1998); see Henderson v. Shinseki, 562 U.S. 428, 439 (2011) (§ 7252 “prescribes the jurisdiction of the Veterans Court”).

Separately, 38 U.S.C. § 7261 “provides the standards the Veterans Court must use when reviewing actions of the Secretary.” Martin v. O’Rourke, 891 F.3d 1338, 1343 (Fed. Cir. 2018). Section 7261 “does not itself create jurisdiction in the [Veterans Court]” absent a board decision. See Mayer v. Brown, 37 F.3d 618, 620 (Fed. Cir. 1994), overruled on other grounds, Bailey v. West, 160 F.3d 1360 (Fed. Cir. 1998) (“Section 7261 merely sets out the scope of the review to be conducted by the [Veterans Court] in cases within its jurisdiction[.]”); Henderson, 562 U.S. at 439 (noting that § 7252 falls under the statutory subchapter “Organization and Jurisdiction” while § 7261 falls under the statutory subchapter “Procedure”); Sioux Honey Ass’n v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 672 F.3d 1041, 1052 (Fed. Cir. 2012) (“[A] court’s power to grant relief is not synonymous with its ability to exercise jurisdiction, as these concepts are separate and distinct. Power does not necessarily envelop the concept of jurisdiction.”). The en banc Veterans Court recently confirmed that § 7261 “does not provide an independent basis for jurisdiction.” Skaar v. Wilkie, 32 Vet. App. 156, 180-81 (2019) (en banc) (citing In re Wick, 40 F.3d at 371).

“Taken together, section 7252 and 7261 allow [the Veterans Court] to decide questions of law and compel unlawfully withheld secretarial action, among other things, in the context of reviewing final Board decisions.” Appx37 (Falvey, J.). The AWA correspondingly authorizes the court to issue writs of mandamus that aid its exercise of appellate review of board decisions. See Burris v. Wilkie, 888 F.3d 1352, 1356-59 (Fed. Cir. 2018); see Am. Legion, 21 Vet. App. at 7 (“[T]he Court has jurisdiction to issue a writ of mandamus only if granting the petition could lead to a final Board decision for the petitioner over which the Court would have jurisdiction.”). Most notably, the court may order “the Board to issue a final determination in a case where it had not already done so.” Monk v. Shulkin, 855 F.3d 1312, 1318 (Fed. Cir. 2017) (citation omitted).

Yet the writ here did not aid the Veterans Court’s exercise of jurisdiction over a board decision. Ms. Wolfe did not contend that anything was preventing her from obtaining a board decision for review by the court. See Appx37-38 (“[Ms. Wolfe] does not contend that the Secretary is refusing to process her claim, unreasonably delaying its adjudication, or performing any other action that would prevent her dispute from making its way to our Court.”) (Falvey, J.). Ms. Wolfe was still administratively appealing VA’s initial decision when she petitioned for the writ. Appx116-17. It is beyond dispute, therefore, that if Ms. Wolfe had simply continued to follow the title 38 appeals process to receive a board decision, she could have appealed to the Veterans Court. In this situation, mandamus was not appropriate. See Roche, 319 U.S. at 25 (mandamus is appropriate when the court’s “appellate jurisdiction could be defeated and . . . thwarted by unauthorized action of the [lower tribunal] obstructing the appeal”).

In its haste to address the merits of Ms. Wolfe’s regulatory challenge, the majority ignored Ms. Wolfe’s unobstructed path to the Veterans Court and found that § 17.1005(a)(5) itself impedes the court’s exercise of jurisdiction over other claims because it presents the law “so categorically” that it could (1) have a “chilling effect” on new claimants, or (2) dissuade claimants already seeking reimbursement from appealing an adverse VA or board decision. Appx17. Aside from hyperbole, the majority offered no support for this finding, such as an indication that § 17.1005(a)(5) was in fact dissuading providers or veterans from seeking reimbursement.⁸ The very existence of Ms. Wolfe’s appeal, not to mention the tens of thousands of claims and appeals of the members of the Wolfe Class, suggests that the regulation was not having such an effect. Instead of support, the majority offered speculation, but speculation cannot justify mandamus, one of “the most potent weapons in the judicial arsenal . . .,” which is “to be invoked only in extraordinary circumstances.” Cheney, 542 U.S. at 380 (citation omitted); Bankers Life & Cas. Co. v. Holland, 436 U.S. 349, 382-83 (1953).

There is also no precedential support for the notion that a substantive regulation detailing when VA will reimburse health care expenses has any effect on the court’s exercise of jurisdiction. We are unaware of any case in which a court invalidated a substantive regulation under the AWA because it stated the law “categorically,” and the majority cited none. Instead, the majority string cited cases about the court’s power to remedy unreasonable agency delay. Appx18 n.113. But agency delay is the quintessential example of agency conduct that can stymy a court’s exercise of jurisdiction, and for which mandamus is uniquely appropriate.⁹ See Martin, 891 F.3d at 1343; Bankers Life & Cas. Co., 346 U.S. at 383 (the AWA “is meant to be used only in the exceptional case” of lower tribunal “usurpation of judicial power”); Heath v. West, 11 Vet. App. 400, 402-03 (1998) (“[I]f the petitioner had petitioned the [c]ourt to order VA to adjudicate his claim, that would have been an entirely different matter,” but he may not invoke the AWA “to obtain a merits decision from us”), aff’d per curiam, 215 F.3d 1342 (Fed. Cir. 1999) (table). No speculation is needed to trace a line between an allegation of agency delay and the court’s exercise of jurisdiction. The same cannot be said of an ordinary VA benefits regulation, even if it states the law “categorically.”¹⁰ See Appx38 (“[I]nforming claimants that their claims have been denied under § 17.1005(a)(5) is not the functional equivalent of a refusal to act. The Secretary is required by law to inform a claimant of the bases on which VA has denied her claim.”) (Falvey, J.).¹¹

The writ thus reflects an unduly expansive reading of the AWA that this Court should correct on appeal. There are scores of VA regulations written in similarly decisive language so that nothing in § 17.1005(a)(5) (“VA will not reimburse . . .”) distinguishes it from any other regulation that spells out the limits of a statutory benefit. E.g., 38 C.F.R. § 21.7122 (setting forth various education expenses that VA will not pay for). And there are millions of claims decisions every year that inform claimants that VA lacks the legal authority to grant a claim or that a claim must be denied under the law, like VA’s denial here (Appx199), and which Congress expected claimants to appeal through the board to the Veterans Court. Under Wolfe, however, all these regulations may be subject to direct Veterans Court review under the AWA. See Appx37-38 (Falvey, J.). Indeed, the writ all but invites claimants facing an unfavorable regulation to petition for mandamus rather than follow the statutory appeals process. The troubling implications of this approach to mandamus are patent. See Beasley, 709 F.3d at 1159 (rejecting a theory of mandamus that “[i]f adopted more broadly . . . could lead to the widespread use of the writ of mandamus as a substitute for the ordinary appeals process . . .”).

¹¹ The majority also viewed the regulation as an attempt “to circumvent [the] Staab decision (or at least its effects), amounting to a clear abuse of administrative discretion and disrespect for judicial power” Appx17 (citation omitted). But it is commonplace for executive agencies to amend regulations, or legislators to amend statutes, in response to a court decision. It is unclear how this is a matter of “disrespect” or “clear abuse of administrative discretion” when VA has the authority to promulgate rules and complied with all appropriate procedures in amending § 17.1005.

We recognize that courts may issue writs in aid of prospective jurisdiction, but the writ here did not clear a path for Ms. Wolfe or any prospective appellant to reach the Veterans Court. See FTC v. Dean Foods Co., 384 U.S. 597, 603 (1966) (the AWA “extends to the potential jurisdiction of the appellate court” over appeals that are “not then pending but may later be perfected” if appellate jurisdiction “might otherwise be defeated” (citation omitted)). Rather, by deciding the merits of Ms. Wolfe’s claim (and those of the class), the writ effectively eliminated the need for Ms. Wolfe or Wolfe Class members to seek § 7252(a) review of an adverse board decision on a § 1725 claim. See Appx39 (“Ms. Wolfe’s status as a prospective appellant allows us to use our mandamus power only if her requested relief were related to bringing her case within our appellate jurisdiction. But Ms. Wolfe’s petition does not request such relief.”) (Favley, J.). This explains why courts may not use mandamus to decide the merits of a matter for a lower tribunal. See Platt v. 3M, 376 U.S. 240, 245 (1964); Bankers Life & Cas. Co., 346 U.S. at 383; Ex parte Burtis, 103 U.S. 238, 238 (1880); Erspamer v.

Derwinski, 1 Vet. App. 3, 9 (1990) (a writ can require that “a decision be made,” but cannot “compel a specific type or character of a decision”).

But that is precisely what happened here. The writ decided the merits of Ms. Wolfe’s claim. As a result, Ms. Wolfe never needed to appeal to the Veterans Court, nor will any member of the class. For this reason, the writ did not protect the court’s jurisdiction, and should be reversed.

III. The Writ Impermissibly Expanded The Veterans Court’s Jurisdiction

The court’s approach to mandamus leads to another problem—it expanded the court’s jurisdiction. See In re Wick, 40 F.3d at 373 (“The All Writs Act does not augment the jurisdiction of a court[.]”). As this Court held in Cox, the AWA only provides “for the issuance of writs ‘in aid of’ the jurisdiction already possessed by a court.” Cox, 149 F.3d at 1363 (emphasis added) (citation omitted). This Court has made clear that “the jurisdiction of the Veterans Court by statute only reaches to a ‘decision of the Board.’” Maggitt v. West, 202 F.3d 1370, 1375 (Fed. Cir. 2000) (citing 38 U.S.C. § 7252(a)); see also Ledford, 136 F.3d at 779. Put simply, “the [Veterans Court’s] jurisdiction is premised on and defined by the Board’s decision concerning the matter being appealed.” Id. at 776 (quoting 38 U.S.C. § 7252(b) (1994)). Yet here, the majority determined that, even without a board decision on Ms. Wolfe’s claim, the court had jurisdiction over its merits. This holding contradicts title 38 and this Court’s precedent.

Congress vested the board with exclusive jurisdiction to review initial VA claims decisions, 38 U.S.C. §§ 7104, 7105, and vested the Veterans Court with exclusive jurisdiction to review board decisions adverse to claimants. 38 U.S.C. §§ 7252(a), 7266(a). Congress directed that the Veterans Court’s review of board decisions “shall be limited to the scope provided in section 7261 of this title.” Id. § 7252(b). As relevant here, § 7261(a)(3) authorizes the Veterans Court to review VA regulations as applied by the board. See 38 U.S.C. §§ 7252(a), 7261(a)(3); Mayer, 37 F.3d at 620. And finally, Congress gave this Court exclusive jurisdiction over direct (or facial) challenges to VA regulations. 38 U.S.C. § 502. When it granted Ms. Wolfe’s mandamus petition, the Veterans Court overstepped the clear boundaries of these jurisdictional statutes.

A. The Writ Seized This Court’s Exclusive Jurisdiction To Hear Direct Challenges To VA Regulations

Congress could hardly have been clearer when it stated that direct challenges to VA regulations “may be sought only in the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.” 38 U.S.C. § 502. Equally clear is that Congress did not provide such jurisdiction to the Veterans Court in § 7252. This straightforward reading of title 38 is well settled. See Wingard v. McDonald, 779 F.3d 1354, 1358 (Fed. Cir. 2015) (“[I]n 38 U.S.C. § 502, Congress provided that this court, without Veterans Court involvement, could directly review Department actions in adopting, revising, or refusing to adopt or revise regulations[.]”) (emphasis added);

Preminger v. Sec’y of Veterans Affairs, 632 F.3d 1345, 1352 (Fed. Cir. 2011) (“In § 502, Congress gave the Federal Circuit exclusive jurisdiction over challenges to VA actions involving [5 U.S.C. §§] 552(a)(1) and 553.”); Am. Legion, 21 Vet. App. at 6 (“We also observe that, at approximately the same time Congress established this Court’s jurisdiction, it also considered and later explicitly provided to the Federal Circuit exclusive jurisdiction to hear challenges concerning VA rulemaking.”) (citing 38 U.S.C. § 502); Dacoron v. Brown, 4 Vet. App. 115, 117 (1993); see also The Veterans’ Judicial Review Act of 1988: Congress Introduces Courts and Attorneys to Veterans’ Benefits Proceedings, Barton F. Stichman, 41 Admin. L. Rev. 365, 392-93 (1989) (“The VJRA therefore contemplates that claimants can challenge VA regulations . . . through two judicial paths. They can file a direct challenge in the Federal Circuit. Alternatively, they can appeal their individual case to the [board] . . . and, if they lose at the [board], challenge the VA regulation . . . in the [Veterans Court] as part of an appeal of a [board] denial, with subsequent review available in the Federal Circuit.”).

In the face of title 38’s unambiguous jurisdictional boundaries and the unanimous precedent and commentary interpreting them, the majority—citing a lone Ninth Circuit decision—concluded that Congress did not preclude the Veterans Court from hearing direct regulatory challenges. This is so, the majority explained, because § 502 only “delineates the relationship between the Federal Circuit’s jurisdiction and the federal regional circuit courts of appeal and district courts’ jurisdiction.” See Appx19 n.118 (citing United States v. Szabo, 760 F.3d 997 (9th Cir. 2014)). The majority thus found that, through the court’s exercise of AWA authority, it may exercise concurrent jurisdiction over direct regulatory challenges despite § 502. This is plainly wrong.

As detailed above, this Court has uniformly held that § 502’s grant of jurisdiction to this Court is exclusive. See Preminger, 632 F.3d at 1352. Even the Ninth Circuit case the majority cited stressed that “§ 502 plainly states that facial challenges to the validity of VA regulations may be brought only in the Federal Circuit[.]” Szabo, 760 F.3d at 1005 (emphasis added) (citing Preminger v. Principi, 422 F.3d 815, 821 (9th Cir. 2005) and H.R. Rep. No. 100-963 at 28 (1988) (“The committee also believes that the subject of veteran benefits rules and policies is one that is well suited to a court which has been vested with other types of specialized jurisdiction.”)); see also Veterans for Common Sense v. Shinseki, 678 F.3d 1013, 1018, 1022 n.10 (9th Cir. 2012) (en banc) (noting that review of VA regulations “may be conducted only by the Federal Circuit under 38 U.S.C. § 502”). Although the holding in Szabo concerned the Ninth Circuit’s jurisdiction, the court did not cabin its § 502 analysis, as the Wolfe majority suggests, to the relationship between the Federal Circuit and other circuit courts of appeals.

The majority also attempted to justify the court's exercise of jurisdiction over Ms. Wolfe's direct regulatory challenge by conflating the court's authority to review regulations as applied by the board with this Court's jurisdiction to decide direct regulatory challenges. The majority characterized footnote four in Monk as "not[ing] that Congress seemed to intend [the Veterans Court] to hear challenges to VA regulations through class actions." Appx19 n.120 (citing Monk, 855 F.3d at 1320 n.4). But the statements preceding the portion of legislative history cited in footnote four of Monk discuss this Court's exclusive jurisdiction to review "disputed rule making actions of the VA," and are more reasonably read as discussing this Court's direct review of VA regulations rather than the Veterans Court's as-applied review. See H.R. Rep. No. 100-963 at 42. Moreover, the reference in footnote four of Monk to a Congressional Budget Office cost estimate does not remotely suggest that this Court or Congress believed the Veterans Court could aggregate direct regulatory challenges when such challenges may be sought "only" in this Court under § 502.

Likewise, the majority reasoned that, despite its clear language, reading § 502's grant of jurisdiction to be exclusive to this Court "clashes at minimum with sections 7292(a) and 7261(a)(3), in which Congress clearly provided this Court with the power to invalidate VA regulations." Appx18. Again the majority's reasoning ignores the critical distinction between § 7261(a)(3), which authorizes as-applied review in the Veterans Court, and § 502, which authorizes direct review in this Court. See Cheng Fan Kwok v. INS, 392 U.S. 206, 212 (1968) (holding that jurisdictional statutes are to “be construed both with precision and with fidelity to the terms by which Congress has expressed its wishes”). Put simply, the Veterans Court’s undisputed authority to review regulations as applied by the board under § 7252(a) and § 7261(a)(3) does not encompass regulatory challenges absent a board decision. See Mayer, 37 F.3d at 620. That power lies in this Court alone. See Burris, 888 F.3d at 1358-59 (where Congress authorizes relief in one part of title 38, it “suggests that Congress intended” another part of title 38 “not to encompass such relief”); Loughrin v. United States, 573 U.S. 351, 358 (2014) (“[W]hen ‘Congress includes particular language in one section of a statute but omits it in another’ . . . this Court ‘presume[s]’ that Congress intended a difference in meaning.” (alteration added and in original, quoting Russello v. United States, 464 U.S. 16, 23 (1983))).

Finally, the majority remarked that this Court in Monk and Martin “certainly seemed to intend” the Veterans Court to use all its § 7261(a) powers under the AWA even when it is not reviewing a board decision. Appx19. But even if it were proper for the Veterans Court to exercise jurisdiction based on a suggestion, but see Cheng Fan Kwok, 392 U.S. at 212; Burris, 888 F.3d at 1357 (the Veterans Court “is a creature of statute” that “can only act through an express grant of authority from Congress”), neither Monk nor Martin looked at the question presented here—whether the Veterans Court can directly review a VA regulation under the guise of the AWA and grant substantive relief as a result. Rather, both cases dealt with claims of unreasonable delay, which obviously can implicate the court’s prospective jurisdiction. See Martin, 891 F.3d at 1343. Moreover, the Veterans Court does not contravene clear jurisdictional statutes when it compels the Secretary to act. That is not the case, by contrast, when the court uses the AWA to exercise jurisdiction that Congress vested exclusively elsewhere, as happened here. See 38 U.S.C. § 502.

Consequently, because Congress vested exclusive jurisdiction over direct challenges to VA regulations in this Court, the Veterans Court cannot assume such jurisdiction for itself under the AWA. “Where a statute specifically addresses the particular issue at hand, it is that authority, and not the All Writs Act, that is controlling.” Pa. Bureau of Corr. v. United States Marshals Serv., 474 U.S. 34, 43 (1985). Section 502 addresses the issue at hand, is controlling, and does not permit the sort of concurrent jurisdiction the court exercised here by relying on the AWA.

B. The Writ Seized The Board’s Exclusive Jurisdiction To Review VA’s Initial Claims Decisions

The writ also expanded the court’s jurisdiction to include review of VA’s initial decisions on § 1725 claims. However, review of these decisions falls exclusively within the province of the board, 38 U.S.C. § 7104(a), while the Veterans Court's appellate review must await a board decision under § 7252(a). Thus, by using the AWA to exercise jurisdiction over the merits of Ms. Wolfe's claim, which was not yet subject to a board decision, the court stepped directly into the shoes of the board and seized its exclusive jurisdiction. See Appx39 ("In essence, [Ms. Wolfe] requests we exercise original jurisdiction over regional office denials of reimbursement under § 17.1005(a)(5), rather than act in aid of our appellate jurisdiction over final Board decisions. The AWA does not authorize us to act in these circumstances.") (Falvey, J.). The court then amplified its error by ordering VA to readjudicate countless class claims that also were not yet subject to a board decision.

Although a writ that touches on claims not yet decided by the board could in theory protect the court's prospective jurisdiction, this justification does not work here. As noted above, the writ directly decided the merits of claims not yet subject to board decisions in favor of the claimants. Rather than aid the court's future exercise of jurisdiction, therefore, the writ thwarted it. See In re Tennant, 359 F.3d 523, 530 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (Roberts, J.) (noting the distinction between enabling appellate jurisdiction and taking original action); Appx39 ("No case supports the majority's assertion that we may exercise our mandamus power in a case where a petitioner's case is not within our actual jurisdiction and granting the petition would remove the case from our prospective jurisdiction.") (Falvey, J.).

Ms. Wolfe's board decision again proves the point. After the writ issued, the board adjudicated her appeal and granted the claim. As a result, Ms. Wolfe never received an adverse board decision and never needed Veterans Court review. Rather than ensure that it could "discharge its assigned duties" vis-a-vis Ms. Wolfe's claim, therefore, the Veterans Court used the AWA to the opposite effect, ensuring that it would never need to. Additive Controls & Measurement Sys. v. Flowdata, Inc., 96 F.3d 1390, 1396-97 (Fed. Cir. 1996); see Parr v. United States, 351 U.S. 513, 520 (1956) (rejecting mandamus because "[t]his is not a case where . . . appellate review will be defeated if a writ does not issue"). This is clear error.

IV. The Veterans Court Erred When It Held That Ms. Wolfe Was Entitled To Mandamus

"The remedy of mandamus is a drastic one, to be invoked only in extraordinary circumstances." Kerr v. U.S. Dist. Ct. for Northern Dist. of Cal., 426 U.S. 394, 402 (1976). "Ordinarily mandamus may not be resorted to as a mode of review where a statutory method of appeal has been prescribed or to review an appealable decision of record." Roche, 319 U.S. at 27-28; see Lamb, 284 F.3d at 1384. Three conditions must accordingly be satisfied for a writ to issue: (1) the petitioner must establish a lack of adequate alternative means to obtain the desired relief; (2) the petitioner must establish a clear and indisputable right to the writ; and (3) the writ must be appropriate under the circumstances. Cheney, 542 U.S. at 380-81. Even if the Court finds that the writ aided the Veterans Court's exercise of jurisdiction it already possessed, the Veterans Court erred in holding that Ms. Wolfe established the first and second conditions for mandamus.

A. Ms. Wolfe Had Adequate Alternative Means To Obtain Her Desired Relief

To obtain mandamus, petitioners must establish that they lack adequate alternative means to obtain their desired relief. Cheney, 542 U.S. at 380-81. The “no other adequate means” requirement is “designed to ensure that the writ will not be used as a substitute for the regular appeals process.” Id. It is bedrock law that “extraordinary writs cannot be used as substitutes for appeals, even though hardship may result from delay and perhaps unnecessary trial.” Bankers Life & Cas. Co., 346 U.S. at 383; see Pa. Bureau of Corr., 474 U.S. at 43 (the AWA does not authorize writs “whenever compliance with statutory procedures appears inconvenient or less appropriate”); U.S. Alkali Exp. Ass’n v. United States, 325 U.S. 196, 202 (1945) (although “hardship is imposed on parties who are compelled to await the correction of an alleged error at an interlocutory stage by an appeal from a final judgment . . . such hardship does not necessarily justify resort to . . . extraordinary writs”); Lamb, 284 F.3d at 1384.

This well-settled proscription against mandamus substituting for appeals takes on even greater significance when Congress has prescribed a specific method of appeal. Roche, 319 U.S. at 30 (though it may be “costly and inappropriate” to proceed through ordinary channels, if “the appeal statutes establish the conditions of appellate review,” a court cannot issue a writ “whose only effect would be to avoid those conditions and thwart the Congressional [system]”); see Syngenta Crop Prot., Inc. v. Henson, 537 U.S. 28, 32-33 (2002) (“Petitioners may not, by resorting to the [AWA], avoid complying with the statutory requirements”); see In re Newman, 763 F.2d 407, 409-10 (Fed. Cir. 1985) (“Writs of mandamus are to be used only . . . when no meaningful alternatives are available.”).

Congress in title 38 prescribed a statutory method for appealing adverse VA decisions to the board, 38 U.S.C. §§ 7104, 7105, and adverse board decisions to the Veterans Court and this Court. Id. §§ 7252, 7292. The Court has already recognized the adequacy of this process in the mandamus context: “If the Regional Office should reject Lamb’s claim for the earlier benefits commencement date, he may fully vindicate and protect that claim by appealing the Regional Office decision to the Board and, if necessary, to the Veterans Court.” Lamb, 284 F.3d at 1384; see also Dacoron, 4 Vet. App. at 119 (where petitioners can bring a constitutional challenge though a board appeal or in district court, they have “not demonstrated that [they] lack[] adequate alternative means of obtaining the relief sought”); 134 Cong. Rec. S16632 (Oct 18, 1988) (Sens. Cranston and Thurmond explaining how the process proposed in the Veterans’ Judicial Review Act, and ultimately codified, see Pub. L. No. 100-687 (1988), will “provide meaningful review” and “serve the veterans of our Nation well”). Indeed, every year tens of thousands of claimants proceed through the title 38 appeals process. The Veterans Court thus “traditionally only [finds] that a petitioner lacks adequate alternative means to obtain relief where the Secretary has refused to process an appeal.” Solze v. Shinseki, 26 Vet. App. 118, 123 (2013).

But not here. Instead, the majority departed from Lamb and decided that title 38 did not afford Ms. Wolfe adequate alternative means to obtain her desired relief because “disputing the regulation’s validity within the administrative appeals process amounts to ‘a useless act’ and would be futile because the Board doesn’t have jurisdiction to invalidate the regulation.” Appx34. For this reason, the court excused Ms. Wolfe from continuing her administrative appeal and permitted her to go straight to the Veterans Court for substantive relief under the AWA. Appx34-36. This holding is erroneous for at least three reasons.

First, it conflicts with overwhelming precedent prohibiting the use of mandamus as a substitute for the normal appeals process. Cheney, 542 U.S. at 380-81; Kerr, 426 U.S. at 403. If Ms. Wolfe had obtained a board decision, which she was actively pursuing, the Veterans Court on appeal could have considered Ms. Wolfe’s challenge to § 17.1005(a)(5) as applied and invalidated the regulation via precedential decision if it so wished. 38 U.S.C. §§ 7252(a), 7261(a)(3). By excusing Ms. Wolfe from pursuing relief at the board altogether, and using mandamus to grant her substantive relief, the majority substituted mandamus for the normal appeals process. This is clear error. See Bankers Life & Cas. Co., 346 U.S. at 383; Roche, 319 U.S. at 27-28; see also Beasley, 709 F.3d at 1159 (using “mandamus as a substitute for the ordinary appeals process mandated by Congress . . . is not a result that would be beneficial to the [veterans’ benefits] system as a whole, and it is certainly not one contemplated by Congress”).

Second, the majority erred when it considered Ms. Wolfe’s chance of success at the board in its “no adequate other means” analysis and found title 38 inadequate as a result. Although it is true that the board cannot invalidate VA regulations, that is beside the point in the mandamus context. The chance of success at any given stage of a petitioner’s means to obtain relief does not determine the adequacy of those means. See, e.g., Clinton, 526 U.S. at 539-40 (assessing the adequacy of administrative and judicial avenues of relief without considering the petitioner’s chance of success at any particular stage). The majority identified no support for equating “adequate” with success on the merits at a particular stage of the process. To the contrary, “[t]he fact that plaintiffs may not be able to secure the relief they seek at the administrative hearing stage of their claims does not mean that [a statutory] remedial structure, which includes plenary judicial review, does not provide an adequate remedy.” Lifestar Ambulance Serv. Inc. v. United States, 365 F.3d 1293, 1297-98 (11th Cir. 2004) (“Plaintiffs have cited no case, and we know of none, that says that a statutory avenue of review may be deemed ‘inadequate’ for purposes of invoking mandamus jurisdiction merely because full relief must await judicial review of a final administrative decision.”). Ms. Wolfe was actively pursuing relief through the title 38 appeals process when she filed her petition. Mandamus cannot substitute for that process.¹²

The lack of precedential support for the majority’s futility analysis is telling. Curiously, the majority likened Ms. Wolfe to the claimant in Erspamer, Appx33, whose claim had been pending at VA for over ten years. Erspamer, 1 Vet. App. at 4. The Erspamer court found that the only alternative means available to Ms. Erspamer for VA adjudication—“a plea directly to the Secretary”—was futile because she had no mechanism to enforce such a plea and no laws upon which to rely in pursuing such relief. Id. at 9. Even then, the Veterans Court did not just

Moreover, although title 38’s appeals process can be time consuming, the facts presented in Ms. Wolfe’s petition did not reflect any unreasonable delay in VA’s adjudication of her claim. Ms. Wolfe cited statistics about average VA appeal processing times, Appx154, but “reliance on statistics regarding average delays . . . is merely speculative. Each mandamus petition should be based on the facts of that particular case.” Martin, 891 F.3d at 1346 n.10 (citation omitted).

assume that avenue of relief was inadequate, but noted that “petitioner through counsel has written between 30 and 40 letters” to VA, which “serves to indicate that the petitioner has done all that she could to bring this matter to the attention of the [VA].” Id. at 11. Unlike Ms. Erspamer, Ms. Wolfe was only three months into the title 38 appeals process when she filed her mandamus petition. Moreover, from a “futility” perspective, pursuing relief through a statutorily prescribed appeals process is not at all similar to pursuing relief through an extralegal plea. Unlike Ms. Erspamer, therefore, title 38 afforded Ms. Wolfe an adequate avenue to obtain her desired relief. See, e.g., Staab, 28 Vet. App. at 1.

The majority also cited Randolph-Sheppard Vendors of America v. Weinberger, 795 F.2d 90 (D.C. Cir. 1986), for the proposition that “[p]ractical futility in terms of an administrative process can make a formal remedy insufficient and amount to a useless act.” Appx33. But this Court has already rejected this proposition in the veterans’ benefits context. The veteran in Ledford argued that he could raise new challenges to a VA Circular directly in the Veterans Court because the regional office and board could not invalidate it. Ledford, 136 F.3d at 780. The Court rejected Mr. Ledford’s effort to bypass the agency:

Ledford’s assertion that the agency cannot invalidate the Circular does not relieve him of the obligation of presenting his constitutional and APA challenges to the agency. A lack of agency power to provide a remedy concerning issues beyond its charter does not necessarily relieve a claimant from presenting those issues as part of a challenge to an agency decision.

Id.; see also Bowen v. City of New York, 476 U.S. 467, 485 (1986) (“Because of the agency’s expertise in administering its own regulations, the agency ordinarily should be given the opportunity to review application of those regulations to a particular factual context.”). The majority’s reliance on Randolph-Sheppard thus conflicts with the reasoning in Ledford and is unavailing.

It is also unclear why the majority focused its “no other adequate means” analysis on Ms. Wolfe’s chance of success at the board when she had access to the entire title 38 appeals process, which includes judicial review by the Veterans Court and this Court, both of which may invalidate VA regulations. 38 U.S.C. §§ 7261(a)(3), 7292(d); see Lamb, 284 F.3d at 1384. In Heckler v. Ringer, the Supreme Court rejected the proposition that an avenue of relief that includes judicial review is inadequate simply because the administrative stage may not provide the desired substantive relief. Heckler, 466 U.S. 602, 616-17 (1984) (“Here respondents clearly have an adequate remedy in [42 U.S.C.] § 405(g) for challenging all aspects of the Secretary’s denial of their claims for payment” in district court, “including any objections they have to the instructions or to the ruling if either ultimately should play a part in the Secretary’s denial of their claim.”); cf. Skaar, 32 Vet. App. at 187 (“[B]efore a claimant succeeds in changing the law, VA will always (presumably) adjudicate claims in accord with its own interpretation of the law and our legal pronouncements.”). Administrative and judicial review was available to Ms. Wolfe under title 38. As a result, she had more than adequate means to obtain her desired relief.

The folly of the majority's "no other adequate means" determination is altogether glaring when juxtaposed with its determination that mandamus was appropriate because § 17.1005(a)(5) could discourage veterans from seeking board review. Appx17. The majority explained contrarily that Ms. Wolfe need not even bother pursuing relief from the board because doing so would be "useless[.]" Appx33. According to the majority, therefore, board appeals are necessary but also useless. This cannot be right.

Finally, even if administrative futility has a role to play in the "no other adequate means" analysis, it was not "useless" for Ms. Wolfe's claim to receive a board decision. The board could have, for example, granted her claim by rendering a finding of fact that averts the limitation of § 17.1005(a)(5). Or it could have interpreted the regulation differently than the Veterans Court did. Every year, the board moots countless potential legal questions in VA appeals by rendering factual findings that warrant an award or by interpreting the law in a way that results in an award. Even if the board would have denied Ms. Wolfe's claim, its decision still would have made factual findings that serve meaningful judicial review. See Nutrition 21 v. United States, 930 F.2d 867, 869 (Fed. Cir. 1991) ("Sufficient factual findings on material issues are necessary to allow [an appellate] court to have a basis for meaningful review.”); see also 38 U.S.C. § 7261(c); Hensley, 212 F.3d at 1263 (“[A]ppellate tribunals are not appropriate fora for initial fact finding.”); see, e.g., Appx30-31 (complaining that VA had not explained how deductibles and coinsurance are “similar” to copayments or provided “data that shows us that [VA’s] regulation creates a different world than the one that [the] previous regulation did”).

For these reasons, and others, Congress required the board to decide appeals before Veterans Court review. See, e.g., 134 Cong. Rec. S16632. If Congress had desired a shortcut for the Veterans Court to directly review regulatory or legal issues, it could have provided one. Instead, Congress provided for direct judicial review of VA rules and regulations with no board decision in this Court, not the Veterans Court. 38 U.S.C. § 502. And, prior to Veterans Court review, Congress directed the board to “decide all questions of law and fact,” 38 U.S.C. §§ 511(a), 7104(a) (emphasis added), even though the board cannot invalidate regulations, id. § 7104(c). Thus, Congress clearly does not consider “useless” a process where board decisions precede Veterans Court review, even when the outcome of a particular claim hangs on a purely legal question.¹³ See Appx41 (Falvey, J.). Even on its own flawed terms, therefore, the court erred when it held that Ms. Wolfe’s board appeal was useless and that she did not have adequate alternative means to obtain her desired relief.

B. Ms. Wolfe Did Not Have A Clear And Indisputable Right To Mandamus

To obtain mandamus, petitioners must also establish that they have a clear and indisputable right to a writ. Cheney, 542 U.S. at 380-81. The Veterans Court held that Ms. Wolfe had such a right because § 17.1005(a)(5) conflicts with § 1725, as interpreted in Staab.¹⁴ Appx28-33. After deeming the regulation an impermissible construction of § 1725(c)(4)(D), Appx29; Appx31-33, the majority interpreted the statute to only prohibit VA from reimbursing expenses that are quantitatively similar to copayments because this construction harmonizes § 1725(c)(4)(D) with Staab. Appx31-32. This holding is erroneous.

As an initial matter, § 17.1005(a)(5) is a valid exercise of VA’s authority under § 1725, which directs VA to promulgate regulations that “establish the maximum amount payable” and “delineate the circumstances under which such payments may be made.” 38 U.S.C. § 1725(c)(1)(A) and (B). Congress explicitly limited VA’s reimbursement authority in 2010 by prohibiting it from reimbursing

“any copayment or similar payment that the veteran owes . . . under a health-plan contract.” 38 U.S.C. § 1725(c)(4)(D). Thus, when VA stated in the Federal Register in 2018 that it was “clarifying that VA will not reimburse a claimant under this section for any deductible, copayment, coinsurance, or similar payment,” VA was exercising its statutorily delegated authority in a manner “consistent with” the ECFA, which “prohibits” VA from reimbursing “any copayment or similar payment.” 83 Fed. Reg. at 977; see Morton v. Ruiz, 415 U.S. 199, 231 (1974) (“The power of an administrative agency to administer a congressionally created and funded program necessarily requires the formulation of policy and the making of rules to fill any gap left, implicitly or explicitly, by Congress.”). The majority failed to consider whether § 17.1005(a)(5) is appropriate in light of VA’s explicit and broad authority under § 1725(c)(1)(A) and (B), and thus erred when it only considered whether § 17.1005(a)(5) reflects a reasonable interpretation of “similar payment” in § 1725(c)(4)(D).

Even if we look at § 17.1005(a)(5) strictly as an interpretation of “similar payment” in § 1725(c)(4)(D), it is reasonable. Deductibles, coinsurance, and copayments are, and were when Congress enacted the ECFA, common health insurance cost-sharing tools. See, e.g., 42 C.F.R. § 447.54 (2009) (referring to “deductible, coinsurance, co-payments or similar cost-sharing charge” in Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services regulation). Shortly after Congress passed the ECFA, it passed the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, Pub. L. No. 111-148, 124 Stat. 119 (2010) (ACA), which defined the term “cost-sharing” to include “deductibles, coinsurance, copayments, or similar charges[.]” 42 U.S.C. § 18022(c)(3)(A)¹⁵; see Sanford Health Plan v. United States, 969 F.3d 1370, 1373 (Fed. Cir. 2020) (recognizing that copayments, deductibles, and coinsurance are similar “cost shares”); cf. Zuni Pub. Sch. Dist. No. 89 v. Dept. of Educ., 550 U.S. 81, 98 (2007) (looking to other statutes where Congress “has clarified the matter here at issue thereby avoiding comparable ambiguity” to understand undefined statutory language). Section 17.1005(a)(5) thus reflects the common understanding of which health plan expenses are “similar” to copayments.

The Veterans Court still rejected VA’s regulation, explaining that it “eliminates in effect any potentially reimbursable, remaining liability for veterans who have partial coverage from a health-plan contract.” Appx31. The majority accused VA of amending its regulations to conform them to Staab by providing reimbursement to veterans with partial health care coverage on one hand, while excluding all possible reimbursable expenses for such veterans on the other hand. Id. But the majority’s analysis turns on an incomplete view of health insurance law in 2019, not the law as it existed in 2010 when Congress enacted the ECFA.

¹⁵ The ACA excluded “premiums, balance billing amounts for non-network providers, or spending for non-covered services” from the definition of “cost-sharing.” Id.

See Wisconsin Cent. Ltd. v. United States, 138 S. Ct. 2067, 2074 (2018) (“[I]t’s a ‘fundamental canon of statutory construction’ that words generally should be ‘interpreted as taking their ordinary, contemporary, common meaning . . . at the time Congress enacted the statute.” (citing Perrin v. United States, 444 U.S. 37, 42 (1979))). This error led the majority to wrongly reject VA’s regulation.

In 2010, when Congress passed the ECFA, Federal law did not prohibit insurance companies from imposing annual or lifetime limits on covered costs. Veterans could thus incur (potentially considerable) costs aside from copayments, coinsurance, or deductibles that health plan contracts would not cover, but that were eligible for reimbursement under § 1725.¹⁶ In addition, veterans with short-term limited duration insurance plans, defined at 69 Fed. Reg. 78720, 78783 (Dec. 30, 2004), that excluded (in whole or in part) emergency treatment services could have become personally liable for some or all of the costs incurred in obtaining such treatment at non-VA facilities. Those costs too would have been reimbursable.¹⁷ The majority thus erred when it concluded that § 17.1005(a)(5) was incompatible with § 1725 as amended in 2010 and later interpreted in Staab.

Moreover, after rejecting VA’s regulation, the majority adopted a flawed statutory construction by interpreting the word “similar” in § 1725(c)(4)(D) to mean quantitatively similar. Appx32-33. The majority identified no real-world out-of-pocket expenses that a veteran could incur that are quantitatively similar to copayments (meaning fixed and relatively minor). Id. Thus, while the majority incorrectly accused VA’s regulation of encompassing a null set of reimbursable expenses, the court’s own construction of § 1725(c)(4)(D) is susceptible to the same argument that it recognizes no non-reimbursable expenses beyond copayments—and thus deprives the statute’s reference to “similar payment” of any effect. See TRW Inc. v. Andrews, 534 U.S. 19, 31 (2001) (statutes should be read to avoid making any provision “superfluous, void, or insignificant”).

To skirt this result, the majority reasoned that its reading of § 1725(c)(4)(D) still gives “similar payment” meaning because it affords VA flexibility if health insurance terminology changes in the future. Appx33 n.228. Although it is true that the majority’s construction gives VA such flexibility, the same can be said for VA’s regulation. See 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5) (“VA will not reimburse a veteran under this section for any copayment, deductible, coinsurance, or similar payment that a veteran owes”) (emphasis added). Indeed, Congress baked this flexibility into the statutory text, as both parties argued below. See Appx33 n.228. But with no indication that Congress only used the phrase “similar payment” to provide VA with such flexibility, the court should not have rendered the statute's text meaningless now on this basis.

Lacking textual support, the majority relied upon two lone remarks by members of the House during the floor debates preceding the ECFA to support its quantitative construction. Appx32 n.223. The first remark noted that the ECFA would “ensure that veterans are not saddled with massive emergency room bills.” Id. (quoting 155 Cong. Rec. H4069-01 (daily ed. Mar. 30, 2009)). The second remark warned that denying reimbursement to veterans with third-party insurance “creates an inequity that penalizes veterans with insurance” that the ECFA would eliminate “by requiring the VA to pay for emergency room care in a non-VA facility, even if the veteran holds a policy that will pay for any portion of their care.” Id. Even if floor statements by individual legislators did not “rank among the least illuminating forms of legislative history[,]” NLRB v. SW Gen., Inc., 137 S. Ct. 929, 943 (2017), these remarks do not reference § 1725(c)(4)(D) or suggest that Congress only intended to prohibit VA from reimbursing expenses that are quantitatively similar to copayments.¹⁸ The majority's holding thus violates the canon against surplusage and lacks support.

In the end, even if the Court prefers the Veterans Court’s construction of § 1725(c)(4)(D), Congress’s delegation of authority to VA to develop the terms of reimbursement and its prohibition on VA reimbursing “any copayment or similar payment” fundamentally undermine the notion that § 17.1005(a)(5) is clearly and indisputably invalid. See Appx40 (“At the very least, the Secretary’s reasoned and persuasive statutory-interpretation argument shows that the invalidity of § 17.1005(a)(5) is not a foregone conclusion.”) (Falvey, J.).

The court’s improvident writ of mandamus should be reversed.

V. The Veterans Court Erred When It Certified A Class That Includes Claims Over Which It Lacks Jurisdiction

A court must have jurisdiction over all claims of the members of a class. Matthews v. Diaz, 426 U.S. 67, 71 n.3 (1976); Reno v. Catholic Soc. Servs., Inc., 509 U.S. 43, 56 (1993) (claims of class members “must satisfy the jurisdictional and justiciability requirements” that otherwise apply); cf. Califano v. Yamasaki, 442 U.S. 682, 701 (1979) (“Where the district court has jurisdiction over the claim of each individual member of the class, Rule 23 provides a procedure by which the court may exercise that jurisdiction over the various individual claims in a single proceeding.”).¹⁹ The Veterans Court recently recognized as much. See Skaar, 32 Vet. App. at 180 (“The proposed class composition depends on whether we have jurisdiction over each subgroup.”).

their state-mandated policies left them “responsible for essentially the full cost of emergency treatment.” Id. at 2-3.

The Veterans Court here certified a class of all “claimants” whose “claims” VA “has already denied or will deny” because the claims were for deductible or coinsurance expenses.²⁰ Appx28. The class thus includes (1) claimants whose claims have “already [been] denied” but who failed to timely appeal the denials, (2) claimants who do not yet have a board decision, and (3) claimants (regardless of the procedural posture of their claim) seeking reimbursement of deductibles.

²⁰ The class is defined in full as

All claimants whose claims for reimbursement of emergency medical expenses incurred at non-VA facilities VA has already denied or will deny, in whole or in part, on the ground that the expenses are part of the deductible or coinsurance payments for which the veteran was responsible.

Appx28. We interpret the class to not include veterans or providers who had not yet filed claims for reimbursement or payment with VA given the court’s use of the word “claimants” instead of “veterans” or “future claimants” in the definition, as well as its order to VA to readjudicate previously denied claims. Appx36. We also note that the use of the word “claimant” in the class definition effectively created a class consisting of claims filed overwhelmingly by health care providers.

The Veterans Court lacks jurisdiction over these claimants' claims and thus erred when it certified the Wolfe Class.

A. The Wolfe Class Includes Claimants With Claims That Have Been Decided And Are No Longer Subject To Appeal

By including “[a]ll claimants” with claims “VA has already denied[,]” the Veterans Court included claimants (veterans or providers) who failed to timely appeal the denial of their claim, meaning that the initial VA or board decisions on these claims have become final and are no longer subject to appeal. The Veterans Court lacks jurisdiction over such claims, see 38 U.S.C. §§ 7105(b)(1)(A) (one year to appeal adverse initial decisions to the board), 7252(a) (Veterans Court jurisdiction over board decisions), 7266(a) (120 days to appeal adverse board decisions to the Veterans Court), and erred by certifying a class that includes them.

In Skaar, issued two months after Wolfe, the en banc Veterans Court held that veterans who did not timely appeal initial VA or board decisions could not be in a certified class because the court lacked jurisdiction over their claims. Skaar, 32 Vet. App. at 186-89. The court explained that, because these claims have become final and are no longer subject to appeal, “[i]ncluding” them in the class “offends the very notion of finality.” Id. at 187. “The proper course for such claimants [to resurrect their claims] is to file supplemental claims based on new and relevant evidence with VA, see 38 C.F.R. § 3.2501, not to attempt to skirt finality and existing precedent merely because of the novel procedural nature of [class actions].” Id. at 188.

The court in Skaar got this question exactly right; the majority here did not. Neither the Veterans Court’s authority to aggregate claims in a “class action” nor its AWA authority changes the statutory rule of finality or somehow allows the court to reanimate closed claims. See Jordan v. Nicholson, 401 F.3d 1296, 1299 (Fed. Cir. 2005) (even where a statute or regulation is ultimately invalidated, the “Supreme Court does not supply a retroactive remedy for final judgments”). As this Court held in Cook v. Principi, Congress provided only two narrow exceptions to finality in the veterans’ benefits scheme. Cook v. Principi, 318 F.3d 1334, 1339 (Fed. Cir. 2002) (discussing 38 U.S.C. §§ 5108, 5109A, and 7111); see Routen v. West, 142 F.3d 1434, 1437-38 (Fed. Cir. 1998) (“Basic principles of finality and res judicata apply to [VA] decisions. . . . Unless otherwise provided by law, the cases are closed and the matter is thus ended.”). These exceptions do not permit final decisions to be reopened through judicial claim aggregation, mandamus, or both. “If additional exceptions to the rule of finality in 38 U.S.C. § 7105(c) are to be created, it is for Congress, not this court, to provide them.” Cook, 318 F.3d at 1341. The Wolfe Class thus conflicts with the finality of VA decisions and the Veterans Court’s jurisdiction, and cannot stand.

B. The Wolfe Class Includes Claimants With Claims Not Yet Subject To A Board Decision

In addition, by including “[a]ll claimants” with claims that VA “will deny” for deductible and coinsurance expenses, Appx28, the majority included claimants in the certified class, like Ms. Wolfe, with claims that (at least at the time) had not yet been subject to a board decision. The Veterans Court’s jurisdiction is limited to reviewing board decisions, however, meaning that the court lacks jurisdiction over a claim until it is subject to a board decision. 38 U.S.C. § 7252(a). Although there are times when the Veterans Court may properly certify a class that includes claims still awaiting a board decision, as suggested in Monk, 855 F.3d at 1318, this reasoning applies when there is an obstruction to Veterans Court review (e.g., unreasonable delay) and when the writ would facilitate such review (e.g., by ordering a decision). When, as here, the class claims have a clear path to Veterans Court review, the court has no actual or prospective jurisdiction under the AWA to pre-emptively seize authority over such claims, and errs by including them in a certified class. Thus, by including claims not yet subject to a board decision in the Wolfe Class, the court erroneously included in the class claims over which it lacks jurisdiction.

C. The Wolfe Class Includes Claimants Seeking Reimbursement Of Deductibles Even Though Ms. Wolfe's Claim Was For Reimbursement Of Coinsurance

Finally, the Wolfe Class includes claims for reimbursement of deductibles even though Ms. Wolfe's claim was for reimbursement of a coinsurance obligation alone.²¹ Appx1. On top of raising serious questions about the court's Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(a) analysis, the fact that Ms. Wolfe could not challenge § 17.1005(a)(5)'s validity with respect to deductibles within the court's § 7252(a) jurisdiction renders erroneous the court's inclusion of claimants with claims for deductibles in the Wolfe Class.

Indeed, because Ms. Wolfe did not claim reimbursement of a deductible, the only way she could plausibly challenge § 17.1005(a)(5)'s validity with respect to deductibles would be a direct challenge to the regulation.²² But as we establish above, the Veterans Court lacks jurisdiction over direct rule challenges; the court can hear only as-applied challenges. 38 U.S.C. §§ 7252(a), 7261(a)(3). And Ms. Wolfe would not, in any event, have standing to challenge § 17.1005(a)(5) as applied to deductibles. See Nat'l Org. of Veterans' Advocates, Inc. v. Sec'y of Veterans Affairs, 981 F.3d 1360, 1369-70 (Fed. Cir. 2020) (en banc).

Although petitioners may try to downplay the practical import of the court's overreach given the common relief afforded to the entire class, it matters. As the Veterans Court recognized, deductibles and coinsurance are not the same, and could implicate different legal arguments. Appx29; Appx33. Most notably, the different features of deductibles (annual fixed cost shares) and coinsurance (variable cost shares with amounts determined on a per-service basis) could lead the court to analyze them differently if presented with different factual records. Had Ms. Wolfe properly obtained a board decision and appealed to the Veterans Court, the record on appeal would likely have contained useful information pertaining to coinsurance, but not deductibles. By rushing to adjudicate the regulation's facial validity, therefore, the court ignored meaningful differences between the different expenses at issue and used its class action authority to sweep in claims ancillary to the claim ostensibly before it. See Appx22-23. This is not a sound approach to class certification for any court, but especially for an appellate tribunal limited to reviewing the record developed below. 38 U.S.C. § 7252(b).

Thus, while class actions are in their infancy at the Veterans Court, we urge this Court to make clear that the court's authority to aggregate claims is limited, as with all courts, to claims within its jurisdiction. In the mandamus context, this means (1) claims over which the court has actual jurisdiction—claims (and issues implicated by the claims) subject to a timely appealed board decision, see 38 U.S.C. § 7252(a)—and (2) claims over which the court has prospective jurisdiction—pending claims obstructed from the court’s appellate review. See Dean Foods Co., 384 U.S. at 603; Roche, 319 U.S. at 25. Such a decision will ensure that the Veterans Court does not trample on title 38’s appeals process when exercising its class action or mandamus authority, and ensure that the Veterans Court follows the same rules that apply to all courts certifying class actions. See Zahn v. Int’l Paper Co., 414 U.S. 291, 296-301 (1973) (courts must have jurisdiction over each claim of each class member).

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, we respectfully request that the Court reverse the writ of mandamus issued by the Veterans Court.

Attorneys for Respondent-Appellant

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR VETERANS CLAIMS

No. 18-6091

AMANDA JANE WOLFE AND PETER E. BOERSCHINGER, PETITIONERS,

ROBERT L. WILKIE,
SECRETARY OF VETERANS AFFAIRS, RESPONDENT.

Before GREENBERG, ALLEN, and FALVEY, Judges.

ORDER

GREENBERG, Judge, filed the opinion of the Court. FALVEY, Judge, filed a dissenting opinion.

We consider today a petition for extraordinary relief filed by Amanda Jane Wolfe and Peter E. Boerschinger. The petition raises two claims related to Congress's command through 38 U.S.C. § 1725 that in certain circumstances the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA), reimburse veterans for the costs of their emergency medical care at non-VA facilities.¹ When petitioners Wolfe and Boerschinger each required non-VA emergency medical care and respectively sought reimbursement for a $2,354.41 coinsurance charge and a $1,340 deductible charge, respectively, VA refused to reimburse them. Those denials began the journey leading to today's decision.

Petitioner Wolfe's claim concerns the validity of a regulation VA adopted in part to implement section 1725: 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5). In her petition she asserts the regulation is invalid and requests that the Court strike it down as inconsistent with Congress's directive. Petitioner Boerschinger's claim focuses on VA's provision misinforming veterans about this Court's interpretation of section 1725 in Staab v. McDonald.² The petition requests that the Court order VA to correct its error by, among other actions, notifying affected claimants and readjudicating affected claims. What's more, for each claim, the petition requests that the Court certify a class. Just on what we have said thus far, it should be clear that we face a complex situation procedurally, substantively, and remedially.

Because the situation is so complex, this order is necessarily lengthy and, at times, likely dense. So, to guide the journey through this order, before we consider the trees, we'll take a look at the forest—the map, the big picture. In plain English, the case boils down to this: Before Staab, VA wrongly interpreted and administered section 1725 by categorically denying claims for reimbursement for non-VA emergency medical care whenever a veteran had any insurance covering the service at issue. Then, in Staab, we authoritatively corrected VA's misunderstanding of section 1725, definitively and unambiguously holding that under the statute Congress did not exclude veterans with any insurance covering a given medical service from potential reimbursement for the expense of the medical service. So far, so good. We have a court correcting an incorrect agency interpretation of a statute. This happens all the time in our system of government. But as it turns out, things took a decidedly unexpected turn.

After Staab, VA adopted a new regulation, purportedly to implement Staab. We'll assume such regulatory action was appropriate, meaning that VA had a statutory gap to fill with a regulation. As we will explain, when it adopted 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5) in Staab's wake, VA excluded from reimbursement nearly every type of expense a veteran could have incurred if he or she had insurance covering the non-emergency VA medical service at issue. So, after Staab, VA adopted a regulation that functionally creates a world indistinguishable from the world Staab authoritatively held impermissible under the statute. As the petitioners put it, "post-Staab, insured veterans are in exactly the same monetary position with respect to insured claims as they were pre-Staab."³ Throughout multiple rounds of briefing and at oral argument, no one (including the Court) was able to come up with a single example of something that would not have been reimbursable pre-Staab that is reimbursable post-Staab. The Secretary failed to provide an example in his initial response to the amended writ petition; at oral argument; in his response to the Court's May 14, 2019, order; in his supplemental response to the May 14, 2019, order; and in his response to the Court's May 31, 2019, order. At the eleventh hour, the Secretary asserts balance billing as an example,⁴ but as we'll explain later, this flimsy example can't save his thoroughly unpersuasive position. The Agency has effectively rolled back the clock and, with no transparency, essentially readopted a position we have authoritatively held inconsistent with Congress's command.

Recognizing this is what has happened is—quite frankly—startling enough. It's difficult to conceive how an agency could believe that adopting a regulation that mimics the result a Federal court held to be unlawful is somehow appropriate when the statute at issue has not changed. But there is more. Even after we decided Staab, and after VA dropped its appeal of Staab, VA was affirmatively informing veterans that they were not entitled to reimbursement for non-VA emergency medical care if they had any insurance covering the service at issue. In other words, the Agency was telling veterans that the law was exactly opposite to what a Federal court had held the law to be. Who knows how many veterans relied on such a misrepresentation—for that is what it was—in deciding not to appeal VA decisions that denied reimbursement for non-VA emergency medical care

All of this is unacceptable. And as we explain below, such an extraordinary situation demands extraordinary relief. For the reasons that follow, the Court will certify the class proposed by petitioner Wolfe concerning the invalidity of 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5), hold the regulation unlawful, and provide relief.⁵ We will also dismiss as moot petitioner Boerschinger's motion to

⁴ Resp't's Sur-Response to the Court's May 31, 2019, Order at 2-3.

⁵ To be clear, by deciding class certification and the merits of the underlying petition in a single order, the Court is not adopting a general policy or framework for deciding such matters concurrently in future cases. However, given the unique circumstances surrounding this case, particularly the nature of the alleged injury and the need for certify a class, though, as we will explain, as part of our order in the Wolfe class we will effectively provide the substance of the relief he seeks.

We take one last look at the map. On our journey, we will first discuss statutes, regulations, and caselaw, as well as the facts of the petitioners' claims. Next, we will consider our jurisdiction. On that question, we'll conclude we lack jurisdiction over petitioner Boerschinger's claim because his claim no longer involves a live case or controversy. But, we will explain why we have jurisdiction over petitioner Wolfe's claim. After we dispense with these critical jurisdictional issues, we will consider whether we should certify a class concerning petitioner Wolfe's claim. We will conclude that a class is appropriate under the circumstances we face. Then, we will consider whether the class prevails under the demanding standard governing issuing extraordinary writs. We will conclude the class is entitled to a writ here. And finally, we will turn to the remedy called for by the facts.

prompt remedial action, the Court has concluded that resolving both matters in a single order is appropriate here. See Godsey v. Wilkie, 31 Vet.App. 207, 214 (2019) (citing Quinault Allottee Ass'n & Individual Allottees v. United States, 453 F.2d 1272, 1276 (Fed. Cl. 1972) (deciding requests for class certification on a case-by-case basis, "gaining and evaluating experience" on an ad hoc basis before adopting general class certification rules)).

I. BACKGROUND

A. The Statutory and Regulatory Framework and Staab

Where we've been says a lot about where we're going. Two decades ago, Congress enacted section 1725 to reimburse veterans for expenses associated with emergency medical care provided by non-VA facilities.⁶ But under the statute's original version, VA didn't reimburse veterans "if [they] ha[d] third-party insurance that pa[id] any portion of the costs associated with such emergency treatment."⁷ "To address this problem," in 2010 Congress amended section 1725 to "allow the VA to reimburse veterans for treatment in a non-VA facility if they have a third-party insurer that would pay a portion of the emergency care."⁸

Congress carried out this aim, in part, by striking "or in part" from section 1725(b)(3)(C), which provided: "A veteran is personally liable for emergency treatment furnished the veteran in a non-Department facility if the veteran has no other contractual or legal recourse against a third party that would, in whole or in part, extinguish such liability to the provider[.]"⁹ Accompanying Congress's main objective was an exclusion: "The Secretary may not reimburse a veteran under this section for any copayment or similar payment that the veteran owes the third party or for which the veteran is responsible under a health-plan contract."¹⁰ Though not immediately important, this statutory exclusion will star later.

In 2012, VA amended its implementing regulations "to conform" to Congress's 2010 amendment of section 1725.¹¹ But VA rejected a commenter's suggestion that "[VA] remove the

Note that the following exchange that took place during a legislative hearing indicates that Congress intended (with no plain language to contradict this intent) that VA reimburse deductibles:

Mr. MILLER. Is it the intent of this bill for VA payment to fully extinguish the veteran's responsibility to the provider so that the veteran wouldn't be liable for any outstanding balance and at the same time, would the VA be required to cover any co-payments or deductible that the veteran may owe to a third payer?

Ms. WIBLEMO. The original intent would be for the VA to cover what was not covered by the partial coverage of whatever third-party insurance they had. That was the original intent.

term 'or in part' from . . . § 17.1002(f),"¹² which at the time stated: "The veteran has no coverage under a health-plan contract for payment or reimbursement, in whole or in part, for the emergency treatment."¹³ VA explained that § 17.1002(f)'s statutory authority was section 1725(b)(3)(B), not (b)(3)(C).¹⁴ VA considered this distinction significant because, though it acknowledged the removal of "or in part" from (b)(3)(C), it noted that Congress hadn't revised subsection (b)(3)(B).¹⁵ VA further explained that "[t]he current language of § 17.1002(f) clarifies the language of section 1725(b)(3)(B) by reiterating the veteran's liability for emergency treatment if such veteran has no health-plan contract 'in whole or in part.'"¹⁶ Thus, VA explicitly declined to change 38 C.F.R. § 17.1002(f).¹⁷ Curiously, the Agency noted that the suggested change to § 17.1002(f) would result in "treat[ing] a veteran with some coverage under a health-plan contract in the same manner as one without coverage,"¹⁸ insinuating that Congress didn't intend such a result.

Before we turn to how we dealt with this situation in Staab, let's make clear how VA operated under its regulation in the pre-Staab world: Assume a veteran was insured for the expense of a particular service (say, the basic emergency room charge) and that he or she met all other reimbursement criteria. After the veteran's primary insurer evaluated the veteran's medical bills and paid for covered claims, VA would evaluate the bills, distinguishing between services covered and those not covered by other insurance.¹⁹ VA would pay "for services not covered in any proportion by the veteran's primary insurance."²⁰ As for the covered services (the basic emergency room charge in our example), VA would categorically deny "any emergency-treatment claims . . . solely because of the presence of other health insurance pursuant to [§] 17.1002(f)."²¹ VA's threshold finding of insurance coverage for any one individual claim meant VA would deny that claim and would suspend any further inquiry into a veteran's remaining liability on that claim.²² This practice seemed at odds with what Congress did in its 2010 amendments to section 1725. Not surprisingly, a veteran, Mr. Staab, challenged this system.

In 2016, this Court decided Staab and in doing so clearly told VA that its reading of section 1725 was wrong. We interpreted section 1725(b)(3)(B) "to contemplate a situation when coverage under a health-plan contract would wholly extinguish a veteran's financial liability."²³ In other words, we said VA would not reimburse the veteran only when other insurance extinguished all liability. Therefore, we concluded that § 17.1002(f) overly restricted eligibility in light of the statute because § 17.1002(f) still excluded veterans with some coverage, something Congress had now prohibited.²⁴ In short, we held § 17.1002(f) invalid because it was inconsistent with the amended section 1725 and Congress's unambiguous language showing Congress intended that "veterans be reimbursed for the portion of their emergency medical costs that is not covered by a third-party insurer and for which they are otherwise personally liable."²⁵ To be clear, this means Staab recognized that Congress did not mean to prevent reimbursement where a veteran has insurance covering some portion of the expense for a certain service and still bears costs related to that service.

The Secretary appealed Staab to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit (Federal Circuit). While the appeal was pending, then-Secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs, Dr. David Shulkin, appeared at a hearing before the U.S. Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs.²⁶ Asked how VA was dealing with Staab, Dr. Shulkin stated that "[VA] ha[d] completed all of the regulations to be able to move forward with payment of the Staab claims, and . . . ha[d] . . . transmitted them to the Office of Management and Budget."²⁷ The Secretary also stated that he was voluntarily withdrawing the Agency's appeal of Staab.²⁸ On July 17, 2017, the Federal Circuit dismissed the appeal of Staab, and the Court's precedential decision became final. To be clear, our decision in Staab was then—and is now—the definitive and authoritative interpretation of section 1725 for purposes of considering the petition before us.

In the wake of Staab, VA ceased processing "all affected claims," while it revised its emergency medical care regulations.²⁹ In the public notice of these revisions, VA acknowledged that "[t]he purpose of this rulemaking is to amend the pertinent VA regulations to comply with [Staab]."³⁰ This bears repeating: VA stated it was amending its regulations to comply with Staab. Two portions of the regulatory changes are relevant to this petition, though the second one is more directly on point. First, VA amended § 17.1002(f) to align the regulation with Congress's direction

No. 111-137] to reimburse veterans for emergency treatment provided prior to the date of enactment who have been financially harmed under the VA's current non-reimbursement policy," H.R. REP. No. 111-55, at 3, VA established April 8, 2016, the date of the Staab decision, as the revisions' effective date. 83 Fed. Reg. 975 (citing Jordan v. Nicholson, 401 F.3d 1296 (Fed. that veterans would be eligible for reimbursement unless they had third-party insurance that would fully extinguish their personal liability for the emergency care.³¹ The new subsection (f) states that payment will be made only if "[t]he veteran does not have coverage under a health-plan contract that would fully extinguish the medical liability for the emergency treatment."³² So far so good, because this language is fully consistent with what in Staab we held the statute means.

The second regulatory change relates specifically to the statutory exclusion (added in 2010) in section 1725(c)(4)(D), that is, the thing that can't be reimbursed. When allowing reimbursement where the veteran's insurance partially covers an expense, in section 1725(c)(4)(D), Congress also stated: "The Secretary may not reimburse a veteran under this section for any copayment or similar payment that the veteran owes the third party or for which the veteran is responsible under a health-plan contract."³³ "Because [after Staab] VA [would] provide payment or reimbursement on claims involving partial payment by a health-plan contract," VA revised 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005 by adding subsection (a)(5) (which "restate[d]" an old version of § 17.1005(f)³⁴)³⁵: "VA will not reimburse a veteran under this section for any copayment, deductible, coinsurance, or similar payment that the veteran owes the third party or is obligated to pay under a health plan contract."³⁶ This regulation was supposedly meant to implement the statutory exclusion in section 1725(c)(4)(D) and presents the central question before us.³⁷ As we will explain, the central question is whether the inclusion in the regulation of "deductible" and "coinsurance" is consistent with the statute's prohibition on reimbursement of "any copayment or similar payment."

Before we move on, let's take a moment to assess this history and how the parties see it. In the post-Staab world, everyone agrees VA still pays "for services not covered in any proportion by the veteran's primary insurance,"³⁸ which is to say VA didn't change from the pre- to post-Staab world.³⁹ According to the Secretary, here's how Staab changed the system: VA no longer automatically denies veterans' claims for covered services; instead, "VA now assesses the amount the third party paid for these covered services to determine whether VA can pay any remaining liability."⁴⁰ But as we will explain below, the Secretary's view of the post-Staab world makes no practical difference because, with one possible exception that the Secretary proffered late in the game,⁴¹ it's not clear what expense VA could reimburse now under VA's interpretation that VA would not have reimbursed before.

And this tracks petitioner Wolfe's view as well. She alleges that VA functionally operates just as it did before Staab. She says, for covered services, the only potentially "remaining liability" (i.e., the only potentially reimbursable expense that an insured veteran could owe after insurance covers a service) takes the form of copayments, deductibles, or coinsurance.⁴² And § 17.1005(a)(5) states that VA won't reimburse "any copayment, deductible, coinsurance, or similar payment." Therefore, petitioner Wolfe says, post-Staab VA functions no differently than pre-Staab VA because veterans have no other remaining liability for covered services and so receive no reimbursements for those services.⁴³

Ostensibly responding to the petitioner's no-other-remaining-liability point, the Secretary insists that other reimbursable costs do exist that insured veterans could owe—namely, costs for services that insurance doesn't cover.⁴⁴ By this, the Court (and apparently, the petitioners⁴⁵ too) understand the Secretary to suggest that VA's reimbursement of services not covered by other insurance qualifies as reimbursement of "remaining liability" on covered services. At oral argument, the petitioners called this a "sleight of hand,"⁴⁶ and, as we explain in more detail below, we think that characterization warranted at worst. At best, the Secretary appears to fundamentally misunderstand his own system. Focusing solely on covered services, the Secretary had failed to identify any other cost to a veteran constituting potentially reimbursable "remaining liability" besides copayments, coinsurance, or deductibles, despite the petitioners' prodding and the Court's multiple attempts to give him an opportunity to do so.⁴⁷ Until his fifth substantive brief (not to mention oral argument), that is. More than 9 months after the original petition came to this Court, the Secretary asserts for the first time that balance billing is an example of a cost representing potentially reimbursable "remaining liability."⁴⁸ As we'll explain later, we're dubious of this position's viability. Not to put too fine a point on it, if the Secretary is correct, VA has been able to recreate the regime the Court held unlawful in Staab. We can't allow that to happen.

Now that we've surveyed the system and the parties' views on the issues, let's turn to the petitioners and the history of this case.

B. Facts and Procedural History

In September 2016, petitioner Wolfe received emergency care at a non-VA facility.⁴⁹ She incurred $22,348.25 in expenses.⁵⁰ After her insurance paid its share, she still owed $2,558.54.⁵¹ Of this amount, $202.93 was a "copayment," and $2,354.41 was "coinsurance."⁵²

Petitioner Wolfe filed a claim for reimbursement. VA denied her claim on February 2, 2018, because "[p]rior payer's . . . patient responsibility (deductible, coinsurance, co-payment) [is] not covered."⁵³ She filed a Notice of Disagreement (NOD) in July 2018, arguing that "[VA's] policy of denying reimbursement for deductibles and coinsurance, as expressed in 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5), is at odds with the plain meaning of 38 U.S.C. § 1725(c)(4)(D), its legislative history, . . . policy interests in favor of expanding veterans' benefits," and Staab.⁵⁴ VA replied to her NOD on August 14, 2018, in a letter stating: "Due to the volume of appeals, we anticipate a delay."⁵⁵ At VA's request, petitioner Wolfe filed an amended NOD in the form of a letter, repeating her earlier arguments.⁵⁶ VA eventually responded with a November 20, 2018, letter: "Our decision is final; appeal closed."⁵⁷ Petitioner Wolfe filed her initial petition with the Court on October 30, 2018.

Meanwhile, petitioner Boerschinger also received emergency care at a non-VA facility.⁵⁸ Medicare had paid some of his bill; afterwards, he still owed $1,340, which he paid.⁵⁹ This amount was a "deductible" that he owed under Medicare Part A.⁶⁰

Petitioner Boerschinger filed a claim for reimbursement. On November 27, 2018, VA denied his claim, citing § 17.1002 and finding that he "ha[d] other insurance coverage eligible to make payment on the claim. The veteran must not have coverage under a health-plan contract for payment or reimbursement, in whole or in part, for the emergency treatment."⁶¹ Further, VA listed eligibility criteria, including the criterion that "the veteran has no coverage under a health plan contract."⁶² Of course, this statement is utterly inconsistent with Staab.

On January 1, 2019, petitioner Wolfe requested leave to file an amended petition seeking to join Mr. Boerschinger as a petitioner.⁶³ On February 1, 2019, the Court granted petitioner Wolfe's motion and allowed the amended petition.⁶⁴

More facts came to light in the Secretary's response to the amended petition. At first glance, they're relevant to the Boerschinger Class exclusively, but as we'll see, they relate to the Wolfe Class too. The Secretary conceded that after Staab VA didn't update its templates for letters denying reimbursement for emergency medical care.⁶⁵ Thus, he essentially conceded legal error. However, he also provided evidence that VA is in the process of correcting the faulty notice, renotifying veterans whose claims were denied, and correcting its templates.⁶⁶ The Secretary stated that VA has divided veterans who were denied reimbursement and provided with faulty notice into three categories.⁶⁷ Category A includes claimants whose claims were incorrectly denied based on other health insurance (OHI) and who received notices to that effect.⁶⁸ Category B includes claimants whose claims were denied for reasons other than the presence of OHI but who received notices that potentially contained erroneous language regarding OHI.⁶⁹ Category C includes claimants whose claims were rejected as incomplete (not denied) but who received notices that potentially contained erroneous language regarding OHI.⁷⁰

On May 14, 2019, the Court held oral argument. From the bench, the Court ordered the Secretary to provide the updated letter templates that VA is sending to claimants and information about which appellate path (the "Legacy" or the "Appeals Modernization Act" (AMA)⁷¹ path) VA would process claims under when upon claimants had received their revised letters and their extended appeal windows.⁷²

The same day, the Secretary provided the updated templates. The letter template for Category A generally acknowledges error but strangely doesn't say what the error was.⁷³ Recall that veterans in Category A are veterans who were denied reimbursement solely because they had OHI. The second template, for Category B, acknowledges a "misstatement," specifies that VA misstated section 1725's requirements related to OHI, and explains the error.⁷⁴ The template for Category C mirrors that for Category B in explaining the error.⁷⁵ Finally, we must keep in mind that the templates for Categories A and C (but not B) contain the following language: "It is important to note that VA has no legal authority to pay a Veteran's cost shares, deductibles, or copayments associated with their other health insurance."⁷⁶ The Secretary stated in his response he would process Category A and C claims under the AMA and Category B claims as Legacy appeals.⁷⁷ But this information is nowhere in the updated letter templates.

On May 31, 2019, the Court ordered the Secretary to provide more information on the reimbursement system for emergency non-VA medical services, its history, and the number of claimants in each of the three categories into which he divided veterans who had received some form of defective notice about section 1725. In response to that order, the Secretary provided data on claims processing under section 1725 from October 2009 through June 2019 but tied no clear arguments to that data.⁷⁸ We can't summarize the information much more succinctly than the petitioners did in a reply the Court allowed them to file:

[The Secretary's] exhibits indicate that Staab has had no impact on the aggregate reimbursements made by VA under [s]ection 1725. [The Secretary's] Exhibit 1 shows that during the period VA suspended the processing of claims affected by Staab—from the third quarter of FY 2016 through the first quarter of FY 2018—VA's quarterly payments under [s]ection 1725 ranged from $95 to $120 million. Exhibit 2 shows that during the second quarter of FY 2018 (January through March 2018), when VA ended its moratorium and began implementing the regulation challenged in this case, VA processed 1.9 million claims—a massive increase compared to the quarterly figures for previous quarters.[□] If Staab affected the amount of payments VA made, then one would expect a major increase in VA payments under [s]ection 1725. Yet, Exhibit 1 shows that in the same quarter that VA processed 1.9 million claims, its aggregate quarterly payments were no more than during each of the three prior quarters when the moratorium was in effect. Exhibit 1 also shows that there has been almost no change in the total amount of money reimbursed per quarter following VA's implementation of Staab and the Regulation, and VA's Response does not suggest otherwise. Thus, Exhibits 1 and 2

are entirely consistent with Petitioner's argument that there has been zero monetary impact to veterans as a result of Staab.^{79]}

This data seems to fly in the face of "[t]he Secretary's 2016 prediction that [Staab] would have a substantial monetary impact on the reimbursement system for emergency treatment at non-VA facilities for non-service-connected conditions," which the Secretary now says was "wrong."⁸⁰ He doesn't mention, though, that his prediction is only "wrong" because of § 17.1005(a)(5)'s effect.

As for the number of claimants in each of the three categories, the Secretary supplied the following information from VHA: "There are 42,050 veterans in Category A, . . . 348,608 veterans in Category B, . . . [and] 229,990 veterans in Category C."⁸¹ Thus, there are over 600,000 veterans affected just by VA's past actions concerning the matters before the Court.

Now that we have the facts on the table, we can turn to our analysis, starting with jurisdiction.

II. JURISDICTION

Before we can address either the merits of the amended petition or the potential class certification, we must first consider whether we have jurisdiction to do what the petitioners ask.⁸² Even if the Secretary was silent on the question of jurisdiction, we would discuss it because we have an "independent obligation to police [our] own jurisdiction."⁸³ We "must raise and decide jurisdictional questions that the parties either overlook or elect not to press."⁸⁴ The Secretary argued that we lack jurisdiction over both classes. We address each class in turn. In sum, we lack jurisdiction over the Boerschinger Class but have jurisdiction over the Wolfe Class.

A. Boerschinger Class

Petitioner Boerschinger requests certification of a class of veterans "who[] have been or will be harmed by the VA in that the VA has sent them correspondence regarding their claims for reimbursement of emergency medical expenses incurred at non-VA facilities stating, incorrectly, that one criterion for reimbursement is that the veteran have 'no coverage under a health plan contract.'" ⁸⁵ On behalf of himself and those similarly situated veterans (collectively, the "Boerschinger Class"), Petitioner Boerschinger asks the Court to

3. Enjoin the Secretary from issuing any communication to veterans that incorrectly states that one of the criteria for reimbursement is that the veteran has no coverage at all under any health plan contract;
4. Order the Secretary to re-issue all communications, sent to claimants since the Court's precedential opinion issued in Staab (on April 8, 2016), that incorrectly stated that one of the criteria for reimbursement is that the veteran have no coverage at all under a health plan contract;
5. Order the Secretary to [reset] the deadlines applicable to veterans who received this correspondence for appealing any VA denial of their reimbursement claims; and
6. Order such other relief as may be appropriate in the interest of justice and in aid of the Court's jurisdiction.⁸⁶

The Secretary has provided, or is in the process of providing, the proposed Boerschinger Class all its requested relief. He's claimed to have stopped sending communications to veterans that incorrectly state that one of the criteria for reimbursement is that the veteran has no coverage at all under any health plan contract.⁸⁷ He's sending out letters that correct the specific error identified in the Boerschinger portion of the petition informing veterans that VA will readjudicate claims for which they were denied reimbursement because they have insurance coverage and will reset the applicable deadlines for appealing denials of claims.⁸⁸

This Court adheres to the case-or-controversy jurisdictional requirements imposed by Article III of the U.S. Constitution.⁸⁹ A case or controversy ceases to exist, and a case becomes moot, "when the issues presented are no longer "live" or the parties lack a legally cognizable

Of course, as we will explain below, two of those letters ultimately are defective to the extent they inform veterans that VA will not reimburse a veteran for coinsurance or deductibles. But the correction of that error can best be dealt with as part of the relief provided to Ms. Wolfe and the class we will certify for her portion of the petition.

interest in the outcome."⁹⁰ When a case becomes moot during the course of litigation, the proper outcome is to dismiss the case for lack of jurisdiction, unless an exception to mootness applies.⁹¹

Because Petitioner Boerschinger and his proposed class have received or are receiving the requested relief, there's no longer a case or controversy with respect to the Boerschinger Class issues. Therefore, the Court will dismiss those portions of the amended petition for lack of jurisdiction.

B. Wolfe Class

On the other hand, we have jurisdiction to act with respect to the Wolfe Class for the following reasons. The Secretary's arguments to the contrary are not persuasive.

Petitioner Wolfe asks us to certify a class of veterans "who[] have been or will be harmed by the Secretary's unlawful regulation in that the VA has already denied or will deny in the future, in whole or in part, their claims for reimbursement of emergency medical expenses incurred at non-VA facilities on the ground that the expenses are part of the deductible or coinsurance payments for which the veteran was responsible."⁹² There is no question that Ms. Wolfe's claim presents a live case or controversy. She was denied reimbursement for non-VA medical services based on what she asserts is an unlawful regulation. As we will explore, the jurisdictional question for her focuses on the method by which she seeks to vindicate her rights.

Petitioner Wolfe seeks relief under the All Writs Act (AWA), which provides that "all courts established by Act of Congress may issue all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of their respective jurisdiction."⁹³ But the AWA standing alone cannot support our jurisdiction.⁹⁴ As its plain language indicates, that statute is designed to aid jurisdiction a court otherwise possesses. "However, [AWA] jurisdiction extends beyond pending cases; it embraces the prospective and potential jurisdiction of a court as well."⁹⁵ A court may use this AWA power "where an appeal is not then pending but may be later perfected."⁹⁶ As we have noted before, "if [our] granting of the petitioner's petition would lead to a [Board] decision over which [we] would have jurisdiction

There is an exception to mootness related to putative class actions for claims that are "inherently transitory." See Godsey, 31 Vet.App. at 218. The aim of this exception is, in essence, to prevent a defendant (in district courts) from mooting a class action by providing relief to the named plaintiff. Id. That is not what happened here. The Secretary's actions resolved the error for all members of the putative Boerschinger Class. Therefore, the inherently transitory exception to mootness does not apply on the facts before us.

[under 38 U.S.C. § 7252(a)], [we] would possess jurisdiction to issue a writ of mandamus."⁹⁷ In other words, we have jurisdiction under the AWA where we would otherwise "be prevented or frustrated from exercising [our] statutorily granted jurisdiction over a Board decision."⁹⁸ And in this regard it bears emphasis that we need not be certain about what the future will hold. Jurisdiction under the AWA may be proper to entertain a petition in aid of prospective appellate jurisdiction where it is "impossible . . . to predict what course petitioner's claim might follow in the future" and "there is nothing to be gained by engaging in such an exercise."⁹⁹ "[I]t is sufficient to note only that the [alleged VA inaction] directly and adversely effects [our] potential and prospective appellate jurisdiction."¹⁰⁰

Congress intended the AWA to function very much at courts' discretion, trusting courts to utilize the AWA to respond to unusual situations flexibly as circumstances warrant.¹⁰¹ "It permits federal courts to fill gaps in their judicial power where those gaps would thwart the otherwise proper exercise of their jurisdiction."¹⁰² Though there are "traditional" applications of mandamus, "[s]ome flexibility is required if the extraordinary writ is to remain available for extraordinary situations."¹⁰³

A variety of circumstances, ranging from innocent inefficiency to egregious interference, may call for writs under the AWA to protect our prospective jurisdiction. For example, where VA fails or refuses to adjudicate a claim presented, we have the authority to direct the Secretary to act on that claim.¹⁰⁴ The reason is simple: if the Agency never acts, we could never exercise our jurisdiction. The same would be true if the Agency sought "to restrict [our] jurisdiction . . . through intimidation."¹⁰⁵ In that case, we "would have jurisdiction [under the AWA] to issue an injunction in defense of our jurisdiction."¹⁰⁶

Under this well-established AWA law concerning the protection of prospective jurisdiction and based on the particular facts before us, we conclude that we have jurisdiction to provide the relief petitioner Wolfe seeks, both individually and on a class-wide basis, for two independent but related reasons. First, the regulation itself risks frustrating the exercise of our statutorily granted jurisdiction over Board decisions. Importantly, the petitioner alleges that VA promulgated this regulation to achieve the same effect that the invalid regulation in Staab accomplished: severely diminish or eliminate VA's responsibility for non-VA emergency care reimbursements in contravention of the statute.¹⁰⁷ This regulation effectively accomplishes a categorical and systematic means of communicating the futility of appealing reimbursement denials for those who have any insurance. It operates functionally the same as VA's refusal to adjudicate a claim for such people at all, just as before Staab, in that it stops otherwise potentially meritorious appeals from progressing through the system.¹⁰⁸ This is so either because the regulation is the sole basis of denial or it creates a chilling effect on claimants appealing multi-bases denials. Many rationally acting claimants who have been inappropriately denied reimbursement simply won't continue with the administrative process if the regulation so categorically says they will lose at the end of the day, assuming they start the process at all given the regulation. Indeed, this regulation frustrates our jurisdiction in a much more egregious and insidious (if not as pervasive) way than delays do. After all, one could forgive a potential or denied claimant from ever challenging "the law" when VA presents it so categorically. To grant the petition and issue a writ invalidating the regulation would lead to Board decisions for the Wolfe Class members over whom we would have jurisdiction but who may never appeal because of the existence of the regulation itself.

Second, we now know that—in the notification letters seeking to address the Boerschinger Class claims—VA is affirmatively telling a wide range of past claimants who have already been the subject of unlawful administrative action under Staab that they won't be reimbursed for so-called "cost-sharing" devices (coinsurance and deductibles in addition to Congress's specific exclusion of copayments).¹⁰⁹ That is critically important because, if left uncorrected, these past claimants won't appeal or, perhaps, not even continue with a claim. If they drop out after reading the legally incorrect language in the letter, something we'll address in greater detail below, then we would never get to rule on the issue for them; we wouldn't be able to exercise jurisdiction over a portion of the class. This is yet another reason to use the writ under the particular circumstances of this case.

We are cognizant that extraordinary writs are just that—extraordinary. And though mandamus is disfavored to avoid piecemeal appeals,¹¹⁰ we face a truly exceptional situation today in which the petitioner alleges that VA promulgated and uses a regulation to circumvent our Staab decision (or at least its effects),¹¹¹ amounting to a clear abuse of administration discretion and disrespect for judicial power and, thereby, our very constitutional separation of powers. This most certainly justifies the writ.¹¹² And we add that VA would continue to categorically reject a host of reimbursement claims throughout the pendency of petitioner's direct appeal without our intervention, in addition to continuing to mail claimants legally erroneous notifications. Quite simply, an extraordinary writ is appropriate when faced with such extraordinary circumstances.

Despite all of this, the Secretary insists we lack jurisdiction, so we address his concerns specifically. We do so in recognition of the importance of the issues he raises that, in some respects, go to the heart of our system of tripartite government. First, the Secretary reads section 7261(a)'s introductory language ("[i]n any action brought under this chapter [72]") to restrict our jurisdiction to performing actions listed in section 7261(a) only in the context of reviewing final Board decisions. This argument has no merit whatsoever. To begin with, it entirely ignores the well-established general principles concerning the protection of prospective jurisdiction we have discussed. In addition, it ignores a host of caselaw concerning claims of unreasonable delay, law that seemingly could not exist if the Secretary were correct.¹¹³ And to top it all off, the Federal Circuit certainly seemed to assume the Court has this authority in both Monk and Martin.¹¹⁴

The Secretary also argues that 38 U.S.C. §§ 502 and 7292 provide the Federal Circuit with exclusive power to invalidate VA regulations.¹¹⁵ He misunderstands those statutes' import and, thus, overstates their meaning. The Secretary forgets that "the statutory scheme as a whole, the specific context in which [a] word or provision at issue is used, and the broader context of the statute as a whole" all inform any statutory provision's plain meaning.¹¹⁶ Accordingly, we construe a statute "so that effect is given to all its provisions, so that no part will be inoperative or superfluous, void or insignificant, and so that one section will not destroy another unless the provision is the result of obvious mistake or error."¹¹⁷

The Secretary's reading of sections 502 and 7292(c) clashes at minimum with sections 7292(a) and 7261(a)(3), in which Congress clearly provided this Court with the power to invalidate VA regulations. Contrary to the Secretary's reading of section 502 to delineate the jurisdictional divide between this Court and the Federal Circuit, Congress seemingly intended section 502 to delineate the relationship between the Federal Circuit's jurisdiction and the federal regional circuit courts of appeal and district courts' jurisdiction.¹¹⁸ So it doesn't seem to play the role the Secretary wants it to. And section 7292(c) must be read in conjunction with its earlier subsection (a), which is clearly premised on the fact that this Court has the power to invalidate a regulation.

Finally, and related to the Secretary's argument about the Federal Circuit's role, the petitioner argues that nothing indicates that Congress intended to remove an avenue for relief that veterans had before the enactment of the Veterans' Judicial Review Act.¹¹⁹ We agree. In fact, the Federal Circuit noted that Congress seemed to intend this Court to hear challenges to VA regulations through class actions.¹²⁰

Therefore, despite the Secretary's insistence to the contrary, we conclude, after assessing his specific objections and independently considering the matter, that we have jurisdiction to issue the writ that the Wolfe Class seeks. We now turn to class certification and then to whether the named petitioner has shown a right to the writ she seeks.

III. THE WOLFE CLASS

A. Certification

This Court has the "authority to certify a class for class action or similar aggregate resolution procedure."¹²¹ The Federal Circuit declined to prescribe a specific framework for the Court to use to determine whether class certification is appropriate,¹²² and, to date, the Court has not devised its own rules for certifying a class. However, in Monk v. Wilkie,¹²³ the Court determined that we would use Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (Rule 23) as a guide for deciding requests for class certification until we issue our own aggregate action rules.¹²⁴ And recently, in Godsey v. Wilkie, the Court fleshed out the framework for analyzing the class certification issues.¹²⁵ We therefore consider the instant request for class certification under that framework.

¹¹⁸ See United States v. Szabo, 760 F.3d 997, 1003-04 (9th Cir. 2014) (citing H.R. REP. No. 100-963, at 28 (1988) (expressing Congress's intent "to avoid the possible disruption of VA benefit administration which could arise from conflicting opinions on the same subject due to the availability of review in the 12 Federal Circuits or the 94 Federal Districts" and stating that "the subject of veteran benefits rules and policies is one that is well suited to a court which has been vested with other types of specialized jurisdiction").

Wilkie*, 30 Vet.App. 345, 346 (2018) (same).

Under Rule 23(a), the party seeking class certification must demonstrate that

- (1) the class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable;
- (2) there are questions of law or fact common to the class;
- (3) the claims or defenses of the representative parties are typical of the claims or defenses of the class; and
- (4) the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class.¹²⁶

The party must also demonstrate that the action is maintainable as a class under Rule 23(b).¹²⁷ To do so here, the petitioners must establish that the Secretary "has acted or refused to act on grounds that apply generally to the class, so that final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief is appropriate respecting the class as a whole."¹²⁸

Petitioner Wolfe requests certification of a class of those veterans "who[] have been or will be harmed by the Secretary's unlawful regulation in that the VA has already denied or will deny in the future, in whole or in part, their claims for reimbursement of emergency medical expenses incurred at non-VA facilities on the ground that the expenses are part of the deductible or coinsurance payments for which the veteran was responsible."¹²⁹ The Wolfe Class meets the Rule 23 requirements for class certification.

i. Numerosity

The petitioners easily meet Rule 23(a)(1)'s requirement with potentially hundreds of thousands—if not millions—of claimants,¹³⁰ and the Secretary concedes as much.¹³¹ No further analysis of this aspect of class certification is necessary.

ii. Commonality

In Wal-Mart, the Supreme Court held that Rule 23(a)(2) requires a "common contention . . . of such a nature that it is capable of classwide resolution—which means that determination of its truth or falsity will resolve an issue that is central to the validity of each one of the claims in one stroke."¹³² The Supreme Court emphasized that "[w]hat matters to class certification . . . is not the raising of common 'questions'—even in droves—but, rather the capacity of a classwide proceeding to generate common answers apt to drive the resolution of the litigation."¹³³ The existence of even one such question is sufficient to satisfy the Rule 23(a)(2) commonality requirement.¹³⁴ "Factual and legal differences among class members' claims will prove fatal to commonality when those differences 'have the potential to impede the generation of common answers' to the questions proposed by the class."¹³⁵

As Petitioner Wolfe argues,¹³⁶ this class meets the commonality requirement. Whether the Court should grant the writ the class members seek "depend[s] upon a common contention"—that the regulation is invalid under section 1725—that "is capable of classwide resolution"—in the form of an order invalidating § 17.1005(a)(5), invalidating the Secretary's denials based at least in part on that regulation, and ordering the Secretary to readjudicate those claims based on section 1725's proper interpretation.¹³⁷ There aren't any factual or legal differences among the Wolfe Class members' claims that will potentially impede the common answer to the validity question.¹³⁸ It is a pure question of law.

The Secretary attempts to argue that the Wolfe Class doesn't meet the commonality standard.¹³⁹ But he misunderstands that requirement. He seems to insist that the answer alone must dispose of class members' ultimate reimbursement claims. That standard is too stringent. The purportedly invalid regulation need not serve as the only basis of denial to harm veterans. For example, a veteran could have declined to appeal a different basis for denial simply because he or she viewed the § 17.1005(a)(5) basis for denial as unassailable.

The Secretary relies heavily on the plurality's commonality analysis in this Court's 2018 Monk decision.¹⁴⁰ Initially, we note that the Monk plurality's commonality analysis¹⁴¹ isn't precedential. Even so, this case is distinguishable. Monk concerned unreasonable delay and discussed how reasonableness is a necessarily factual, case-by-case inquiry.¹⁴² In the plurality's eyes, the petitioners' failure to allege common reasons for delay and to target a "specific practice or policy" stymied class certification.¹⁴³ But here we're talking about a facial challenge to a regulation's validity as contrary to statute. This isn't an as-applied challenge of § 17.1005(a)(5); we need look only to other law to decide § 17.1005(a)(5)'s validity. So, any differences in facts doesn't stymie certification of this class as they did in the Monk plurality.

Therefore, we hold that the Wolfe Class presents common questions of law sufficient to establish commonality.

iii. Typicality

The test of typicality is whether other members have the same or similar injury, whether the action is based on conduct which is not unique to the named [petitioner], and whether other class members have been injured by the same course of conduct. Typicality refers to the nature of the claim or defense of the class representative, and not to the specific facts from which it arose or the relief sought.^{144]}

This inquiry focuses on whether "in pursuing [her] own claims, the named [petitioner] will also advance the interests of the class members."¹⁴⁵ This requirement is sometimes considered to overlap with other Rule 23 requirements.¹⁴⁶ "[T]he typicality prong of Rule 23(a) sets a relatively low threshold."¹⁴⁷ Typicality is also easier to satisfy where classes seek injunctive relief.¹⁴⁸

As with commonality, typicality is also satisfied here. In pursuing her claim for reimbursement of her coinsurance payment, petitioner Wolfe will also advance the interests of the class members because she's disputing § 17.1005(a)(5)'s validity, which prevents reimbursement to her, and its chilling effect on appeals, both of which affect the other class members the same way.¹⁴⁹ As goes her claim that the regulation is invalid, so go the class claims.¹⁵⁰ There's no obvious or alleged variation in claims between the petitioner and absent class members that strikes at the heart of the respective causes of action.¹⁵¹ Petitioner Wolfe's claim shares the same essential characteristics as the class claims at large.¹⁵² Like the rest of the class members' claims, her reimbursement claim was denied at least in part because it's a non-refundable payment under the allegedly invalid regulation; thus, she shares the same injury as the other members (responsibility for payments that VA must pay under section 1725), VA's denial citing the regulation isn't unique to the petitioner, and other class members bear the burden of payments based on similar denials of reimbursement claims for which VA should be responsible.¹⁵³

The Secretary's argument that typicality isn't satisfied¹⁵⁴ suffers from similar misunderstandings of Rule 23 as does his commonality argument, which we've already addressed. He argues that VA could find additional reasons to deny petitioner's reimbursement claim or could reverse denial entirely.¹⁵⁵ The latter "possibility" is impossible, though, because VA must follow the regulation.¹⁵⁶ As for the former, additional bases for denial wouldn't make petitioner atypical; her class already includes claimants whose reimbursement claims were denied on multiple bases.

We hold that Petitioner Wolfe's claims are typical of those in the Wolfe Class.

iv. Adequacy of Representation

"The adequacy inquiry under Rule 23(a)(4) serves to uncover conflicts of interest between named parties and the class they seek to represent. '[A] class representative must be part of the class and possess the same interest and suffer the same injury as the class members.'"¹⁵⁷ "Adequacy is twofold: the proposed class representative must have an interest in vigorously pursuing the claims of the class, and must have no interests antagonistic to the interests of other class members."¹⁵⁸ Class representatives serve as fiduciaries for certified classes.¹⁵⁹

Petitioner Wolfe satisfies the adequacy requirement. She has an interest in vigorously pursuing the invalidity argument because the success of her reimbursement claim turns on this issue, and nothing indicates that she has an interest antagonistic to the other class members' interests.¹⁶⁰ The Secretary merely argues that petitioner's interests aren't set yet because she awaits an SOC, but for the reasons discussed in the typicality analysis, this SOC pendency doesn't concern us. The Secretary doesn't allege any other specific conflicts of interest between the petitioner and the absent class members, and we don't independently see any.¹⁶¹

We hold that Petitioner Wolfe will fairly and adequately protect the Wolfe Class's interests.

v. Rule 23(b)

In addition to the Rule 23(a) requirements, a party seeking class certification must also demonstrate that the proposed class is maintainable under Rule 23(b).¹⁶² The petitioner has sought to certify a class under Rule 23(b)(2), which "permits a court to certify a case for class-action treatment if 'the party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on grounds that apply generally to the class, so that final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief is appropriate respecting the class as a whole.'"¹⁶³ As the Supreme Court explained in Wal-Mart, "[t]he key to the (b)(2) class is 'the indivisible nature of the injunctive or declaratory remedy warranted—the notion that the conduct is such that it can be enjoined or declared unlawful only as to all of the class members or as to none of them.'"¹⁶⁴ "Rule 23(b)(2) applies only when a single injunction or declaratory judgment would provide relief to each member of the class. It does not authorize class certification when each individual class member would be entitled to a different injunction or declaratory judgment against the defendant."¹⁶⁵

The relief that the petitioners request in this case—declaratory and injunctive relief¹⁶⁶— "perforce affect[s] the entire class at once" and is, therefore, precisely the type of relief contemplated by Rule 23(b)(2).¹⁶⁷ The remedy of declaring the regulation invalid under the statute and ordering readjudication of the affected claims is indivisible in nature; the Court can address VA's conduct as to all the class members with a single writ in this case.¹⁶⁸ That the scope of effect on different class members will vary isn't an impediment; the writ will affect all class members by removing that basis of denial on the reimbursement claims. Accordingly, the Court concludes that petitioner Wolfe has met her burden of demonstrating that class certification is appropriate in this case.¹⁶⁹

vi. Adequacy of Class Counsel Under Rule 23(g)

"Unless a statute provides otherwise, a court that certifies a class must appoint class counsel."¹⁷⁰ "When one applicant seeks appointment as class counsel, the court may appoint that applicant only if the applicant is adequate under Rule 23(g)(1) and (4)."¹⁷¹ "The court may not appoint class counsel by default."¹⁷²

Rule 23(g)(1) provides, in relevant part, that, in appointing class counsel, the court:

(A) must consider:

- (i) the work counsel has done in identifying or investigating potential claims in the action;
- (ii) counsel's experience in handling class actions, other complex litigation, and the types of claims asserted in the action;
- (iii) counsel's knowledge of the applicable law; and
- (iv) the resources that counsel will commit to representing the class; [and]

(B) may consider any other matter pertinent to counsel's ability to fairly and adequately represent the interests of the class[.]^[173]

The Court is satisfied that the proposed class counsel will adequately represent the Wolfe Class. Counsel has zealously represented the petitioners by diligently and competently identifying, investigating, presenting, and defending claims for relief, including in various pleadings and at oral argument. Via exhibits attached to the amended petition,¹⁷⁴ counsel have shown that they have done extensive work developing the arguments in this case; demonstrated class action and substantive legal experience; demonstrated relevant legal knowledge of veterans, class action, and statutory interpretation law; and demonstrated willingness to litigate the claim.¹⁷⁵ Therefore, and because there are no "other matter[s] pertinent to counsel's ability to fairly and adequately represent the interests of the class," counsel is "adequate" under the terms of Rule 23(g). We will appoint Mark B. Blocker, Esq., of Sidley Austin LLP, and Barton F. Stichman, Esq., of the National Veterans Legal Services Program, as class counsel in this matter.

vii. Superiority

Although Rule 23(b)(2) does not require that the party seeking class certification demonstrate that "a class action is superior to other available methods for fairly and efficiently adjudicating the controversy" like Rule 23(b)(3) does, we nevertheless address that issue, as this Court did in Godsey.¹⁷⁶ The Court hasn't yet created a test or standard for evaluating superiority.¹⁷⁷ But, among other considerations, this case's unique circumstances demand the enforcement advantages that a class action offers over another precedential decision.

Compare enforcement in a precedential-decision versus class-action context.¹⁷⁸ A precedential decision certainly binds VA in future claims.¹⁷⁹ But if for whatever reason VA errs with respect to other claims, those aggrieved claimants don't have any right to prompt remedial enforcement. Full exhaustion of the agency review process, followed by an appeal to this Court, is their only recourse. But sometimes circumstances indicate a need for prompt remedial enforcement. There, class certification provides such enforcement. The resulting relief, if awarded, could be enforced by any class member, particularly those who are absent, who suffers, for example, error based on VA noncompliance.¹⁸⁰

Here, though another precedential decision would undoubtedly bind VA, Petitioner Wolfe's allegations uniquely highlight the inferiority of a precedential decision under the facts before us. VA could circumvent another decision—as it allegedly did Staab—without concern about enforcement beyond another appellate proceeding. If we award the Wolfe Class's requested relief, any class member (particularly those who are absent) who suffers VA's noncompliance could enforce it. This case's allegations about VA's post-Staab conduct demand a means for prompt collective enforcement.

¹⁸⁰ See 38 U.S.C. § 7265(a)(3) (empowering us to "punish by fine or imprisonment" any "disobedience or resistance to its lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command").

Further, the class action device here would allow for consistent adjudication of similar claims involving this regulation and allow the Court to more quickly address this systemic issue to reduce delay associated with individual appeals. The Court can compel correction of the alleged, systemic disregard for both Staab and section 1725 and ensure that veterans are treated alike.¹⁸¹ To force class members to proceed through the normal appellate process individually would amount to a monumental waste of agency and judicial resources in a system already rife with delay.¹⁸² In short, a class action is a more efficient and effective vehicle for resolving this case than a precedential decision focused on an individual veteran's case.¹⁸³

viii. Opt-Out and Notice

We have two final, related matters to consider. We must first determine whether to afford class members the opportunity to opt out of the class we have certified. Next we must determine what type of notice, if any, to provide to the class about this certification decision. The issues are related because, if opt out rights are available, ensuring actual notice of the pendency of the class action takes on greater importance.

Because this is a class certified under Rule 23(b)(2)¹⁸⁴ and relief of invalidating the Regulation and issuing corrective notice is indivisible,¹⁸⁵ combined with the Court's national jurisdiction,¹⁸⁶ we won't allow class members the opportunity to opt out. Because class members don't have the right to opt out of the certified class, notice is less critical than if class members could remove themselves from the class.

This case is comparable to Godsey in that we need not provide notice of certification to the affected class members because, like in Godsey, we're resolving the class certification request and the merits of the underlying petition concurrently.¹⁸⁷ Also, and as we will discuss below, as part of the relief for those affected veterans we grant, the Secretary will issue notice correcting his misinterpretation of section 1725; that notice renders separate notice of certification largely unnecessary as a practical matter.¹⁸⁸

ix. Certification of the Class

¹⁸⁷ See Godsey, 31 Vet.App. at 224-25.

¹⁸⁸ This conclusion, however, is based on the unique circumstances of this case and should not be construed as a holding that class certification notice is not necessary in future cases. See id.

For the reasons outlined above, the Court certifies the following class for purposes of this petition:

All claimants whose claims for reimbursement of emergency medical expenses incurred at non-VA facilities VA has already denied or will deny, in whole or in part, on the ground that the expenses are part of the deductible or coinsurance payments for which the veteran was responsible.

Having decided the request for class certification, the Court now proceeds to the merits of the class members' petition.

B. Merits of the Class Petition

Having determined that we have jurisdiction—or power—to proceed, and that we will certify the Wolfe Class, we turn to whether we should issue the writ requested.¹⁸⁹ This Court has authority to issue extraordinary writs in aid of its jurisdiction pursuant to the AWA.¹⁹⁰ However, "[t]he remedy of mandamus is a drastic one, to be invoked only in extraordinary situations."¹⁹¹ Three conditions must be met before the Court can issue a writ: (1) The petitioner must demonstrate the lack of adequate alternative means to obtain the desired relief, thus ensuring that the writ is not used as a substitute for an appeal; (2) the petitioner must demonstrate a clear and indisputable right to the writ; and (3) the Court must be convinced, given the circumstances, that issuance of the writ is warranted.¹⁹² Because Petitioner Wolfe meets all three of these conditions, we can and will issue a writ here.

i. Clear and Indisputable Right to the Writ

In the context of the petition before us, the question whether petitioner is clearly and indisputably entitled to a writ comes down to whether 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5) is invalid because it is inconsistent with 38 U.S.C. § 1725. As we now explain, it is.

When reviewing "an agency's construction of the statute which it administers," a court always asks first "whether Congress has directly spoken to the precise question at issue," and, "if the intent of Congress is clear, that is the end of the matter [because] the court, as well as the agency, must give effect to the unambiguously expressed intent of Congress."¹⁹³ However, "if the statute is silent or ambiguous with respect to the specific issue, the question for the court is whether the agency's answer is based on a permissible construction of the statute."¹⁹⁴

Again, here are the relevant provisions. The statute states: "The Secretary may not reimburse a veteran under this section for any copayment or similar payment that the veteran owes the third party or for which the veteran is responsible under a health-plan contract."¹⁹⁵ And the regulation states: "VA will not reimburse a veteran under this section for any copayment, deductible, coinsurance, or similar payment that the veteran owes the third party or is obligated to pay under a health-plan contract."¹⁹⁶

Let's assume for the sake of argument that section 1725(c)(4)(D)'s "any copayment or similar payment" language is ambiguous and leaves a gap. In other words, VA rulemaking may properly expand upon "or similar payment." The question is whether VA's inclusion of "deductibles" and "coinsurance" (but not "balance billing"¹⁹⁷) in the list of non-reimbursable items is a permissible construction of section 1725. No matter what standard of review we use,¹⁹⁸ it's not. We hold § 17.1005(a)(5) is not based on a permissible construction of section 1725(c)(4)(D) for two related, but distinct, reasons: (1) It's inconsistent with Staab's interpretation of section 1725, and (2) deductibles and coinsurance aren't "similar" to a copayment (and VA didn't explain—to defeat arbitrariness—how they're "similar" to a copayment).

Let's start by discussing what a copayment, deductible, coinsurance, and balance billing are. A "copayment" is a commonly used word (not simply legalese), and, when possible, courts "assume 'that the legislative purpose is expressed by the ordinary meaning of the words used.'"¹⁹⁹ Consumers of health insurance know that when they visit their doctors or seek urgent or emergency care, they are expected to pay a small, fixed, and consistent amount for their visit, usually between $20 and $50, when they receive their care. VA uses these types of small, fixed-cost copayments for its extended care services.²⁰⁰ Black's Law Dictionary defines the term as: "a fixed amount that a patient pays to a healthcare provider according to the terms of the patient's health care plan."²⁰¹ The U.S. Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services defines copayment as "a fixed amount ($20, for example) you pay for a covered health care service after you've paid your deductible."²⁰² In Riemer v. Columbia Medical Plan, Inc., the Court of Appeals of Maryland defined a copayment as "a relatively small fixed fee required of a patient by a health insurer . . . at the time of each outpatient service or filling of a prescription."²⁰³ These various definitions are consistent, and they inform our definition here: A copayment is a relatively small fixed fee that an insured party pays when he or she receives care.

Ordinary consumers also know that, for many types of insurance coverage, there is a certain amount of money that they must pay out-of-pocket before their insurance company will begin covering their claim—commonly known as a "deductible." Per Black's Law Dictionary, a deductible is "the portion of the loss borne by the insured before the insurer becomes liable for payment."²⁰⁴ The U.S. Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services defines a deductible as: "the amount you pay for covered health care services before your insurance plan starts to pay."²⁰⁵ Deductible amounts are a part of the insurance agreement between the consumer and the insurer and are agreed upon when the parties enter their insurance contract. Although these costs are fixed, they are not typically small. A 2018 survey conducted by the Kaiser Family Foundation noted that "[t]he average deductible among covered workers in a plan with a general annual deductible is $1,573 for single coverage."²⁰⁶ So, in short, a deductible is a relatively large but fixed cost that an insured party pays before insurance begins to pay.

Next, we turn to coinsurance. Black's Law Dictionary does not define coinsurance. However, Webster's Dictionary provides this definition: "health insurance in which the insured is required to pay a fixed percentage of the costs of medical expenses after the deductible has been paid and the insurer pays the remaining expenses."²⁰⁷ The U.S. Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services defines coinsurance as "[t]he percentage of costs of a covered health care service you pay (20%, for example) after you've paid your deductible."²⁰⁸ This health care cost can vary depending on the type and severity of care needed and the terms and conditions of an insurance contract. In sum, then, coinsurance is a relatively large, variable cost that an insured party pays before insurance begins to pay.

Finally, the Secretary asserts that balance billing is an example of a potentially reimbursable cost that is a patient's "remaining liability" beyond a copayment, deductible, or coinsurance.²⁰⁹ Balance billing is "[a] healthcare provider's practice of requiring a patient or other responsible party to pay any charges remaining after insurance and other payments and allowances have been applied to the total amount due for the provider's services."²¹⁰ But both federal and state law to some extent protects consumers against balance billing,²¹¹ so it's not clear how many veterans would actually bear these costs. And the Secretary doesn't allege anything or provide any data that shows us that his regulation creates a different world than the one that his previous regulation did. Nor does the legislative or regulatory history mention balance billing as a cost for which Congress sought to reimburse veterans. So we won't discuss balance billing further. Now that we have an idea of what we're talking about, we address the reasons why § 17.1005(a)(5) isn't based on a permissible construction of section 1725.

First, no matter how you compare a copayment, deductibles, and coinsurance to determine "similarity," as reflected in the Secretary's data, § 17.1005(a)(5)'s effect is what it is: It eliminates in effect any potentially reimbursable, remaining liability for veterans who have partial coverage from a health-plan contract.²¹² As of late, the Secretary even seems to acknowledge and embrace this result; essentially, he posits that Congress gave something (i.e., "removed the partial health insurance bar") that it took away simultaneously (i.e., "erected a bar that covers nearly all of the same ground: the cost-share exclusion").²¹³ Setting aside our first impression of that position as inherently absurd, such a result directly contravenes how the statute works, which we explained in Staab. Though Staab interpreted section 1725(b)(3)(B) specifically,²¹⁴ it ends up being controlling as to how we must construe section 1725(c)(4)(D) too. A minimum takeaway from Staab is that veterans who have partial coverage from a health-plan contract are eligible for reimbursement of "that portion of expenses not covered by a health-plan contract."²¹⁵ As part of its holding, the Court concluded that "Congress intended that veterans be reimbursed for the portion of their emergency medical costs that is not covered by a third[-]party insurer and for which they are otherwise personally liable."²¹⁶ But because § 17.1005(a)(5) in effect eliminates all possible remaining liability, it's necessarily inconsistent with the statute as described in Staab. And we must construe a statute "so that effect is given to all its provisions, so that no part will be inoperative or superfluous, void or insignificant, and so that one section will not destroy another unless the provision is the result of obvious mistake or error."²¹⁷ If we construed section 1725(c)(4)(D) such that § 17.1005(a)(5) was valid under it, then we'd render insignificant those parts of the statute at issue in Staab that allow for reimbursements to veterans with partial coverage.²¹⁸ And, simply put, one can only entertain the Secretary's arguments²¹⁹ if one ignores Staab, which we can't and won't do.²²⁰ For veterans with some insurance coverage, § 17.1005(a)(5) has transformed section 1725(c)(4)(D)'s narrow exclusion into a gaping exception that swallows whole the section-1725 rule. Such a result is "patently absurd."²²¹ And this we can't allow. We could stop there, but there's a second reason why § 17.1005(a)(5) isn't based on a permissible construction of section 1725.

Even if one ignores Staab, deductibles and coinsurance are not "similar" to a copayment. Before we can get into contrasting them, though, we must talk about the appropriate standard of comparison. After all, it's impossible to decide whether two things are similar if you don't know by what to judge them. The plain language of the statute contains guidance on the appropriate standard of comparison: the key statutory phrase "any copayment or similar payment."²²² From that, we know any other excluded payment must be "similar" to a copayment. Specifically, similar in amount and a fixed nature.²²³

The Secretary wants "cost-sharing" as the standard of comparison.²²⁴ But Congress didn't use the umbrella phrase "cost-sharing" to group and exclude copayments, deductibles, and coinsurance, even though Congress knows how to group them together this way and has done it

Brown-Waite) (explaining that the law was intended to "ensure that veterans are not saddled with massive emergency room bills" (emphasis added)). Note also that Congress didn't want to penalize veterans who had some insurance coverage. See 155 CONG. REC. H4069-01 (daily ed. Mar. 30, 2009) (statement of Rep. Halvorson) (noting that "veterans do not currently receive any reimbursement from the VA if they have third-party insurance that pays either full or a portion of the emergency care," which "creates an inequity that penalizes veterans with insurance," and explaining that the amendment "eliminates this inequity by requiring the VA to pay for emergency care in a non-VA facility, even if the veteran holds a policy that will pay for any portion of their care").

²²⁴ Resp't's Resp. to Am. Pet. at 17-18. He argues that all three—copayments, deductibles, and coinsurance—are similar because they are all cost-sharing tools, sharing the same basic function or purpose: to discourage clinically unnecessary treatment. Id. The Secretary also asserts that other Federal programs view these three cost-sharing tools as similar and provides examples. Id. at 18-19. Though he is correct that those are all superficially "similar" in that they are cost-sharing devices, he didn't pick a workable standard of comparison. His standard is redundant of other program criteria that go to establishing the emergent, clinically necessary nature of the care. See 38 C.F.R. § 17.1002(a)-(h) (2019). For example, condition (b) in 38 C.F.R. § 17.1002 provides that the treatment must be "for a condition of such a nature that a prudent layperson would have reasonably expected that delay in seeking immediate medical attention would have been hazardous to life or health." It is evident from VA's overall emergency care regulation itself that any expenses for reimbursement in this context can only be for clinically necessary treatment. This is yet another way of ruling out cost-sharing as the standard of comparison.

elsewhere.²²⁵ Congress has also referred to "copayments or cost shares"²²⁶ elsewhere, but again, it didn't use such language here. Congress's chosen language means that our standard of comparison is whether another payment is "similar" to a copayment, not whether another payment is classified as a cost-sharing device. The latter inquiry has no basis in the statute language before us.

Now that we've determined the appropriate standard of comparison, let's compare. A deductible is not "similar" to a copayment because, though it is fixed, it is not a relatively small fee. Nor is coinsurance "similar" to a copayment because coinsurance is neither a relatively small nor a fixed fee; it's a relatively large and variable fee based on a percentage. And upon finalizing its rule that included § 17.1005(a)(5), VA made no effort to explain its bases for considering them "similar" payments.²²⁷ Therefore, § 17.1005(a)(5), which includes both deductibles and coinsurance as "similar payment[s]," is not based on a permissible construction of section 1725.²²⁸ The class's right to the writ is clear and indisputable.

ii. Lack of Adequate Alternative Means

Having established that petitioner Wolfe has an indisputable right to relief, we turn to whether she has shown that she lacks adequate alternative legal channels through which she may obtain relief in this case. She has under the unique circumstances of this case.

A petitioner shows that she has exhausted and now lacks adequate alternative legal channels if her pursuit of the alternative legal channels would amount to a "useless act."²²⁹ Practical futility in terms of an administrative process can make a formal remedy insufficient and amount to a useless act. "Resort to the administrative process is futile if the agency will almost certainly deny any relief . . . because it . . . lacks jurisdiction over[] the matter."²³⁰ In colloquial terms, we do not put form over substance.

²²⁵ E.g., 42 U.S.C. § 300mm-41(c)(1) (discussing "deductibles, copayments, coinsurance, other cost sharing").

²²⁶ E.g., 10 U.S.C. § 1073 note (regarding the Pilot Program on Incorporation of Value-Based Health Care in Purchased Care Component of TRICARE Program, known as Pub. L. No. 114-328, Div. A, Title VII, § 701(h), Dec. 23, 2016, 130 Stat. 2188).

²²⁸ The Secretary argues that petitioner Wolfe's interpretation would render section 1725's "or similar payment" language superfluous. Resp't's Resp. to Am. Pet. at 19-20. Not so. Petitioner Wolfe suggests that it "provide[s] [VA] flexibility in the event of changing terminology." Pet'rs' Reply to Resp't's Resp. to Am. Pet. at 6. Indeed, she even quotes the Secretary, id., who wrote, "Congress's use of the phrase 'or similar payment' also affords VA the regulatory flexibility to align this provision's scope with evolving health insurance practice and terminology." Resp't's Resp. to Am. Pet. at 20.

²²⁹ Erspamer, 1 Vet.App. at 11; see Margolis v. Banner, 599 F.2d 435, 443 (CCPA 1979).

²³⁰ Randolph-Sheppard Vendors of Am. v. Weinberger, 795 F.2d 90, 107 (D.C. Cir. 1986).

The Secretary asserts only that a direct appeal through the administrative system is an adequate alternative means of seeking petitioner's requested relief (i.e., invalidation of the Regulation etc.).²³¹ Here, disputing the regulation's validity within the administrative appeals process amounts to "a useless act" and would be futile because the Board doesn't have jurisdiction to invalidate the regulation.²³² Thus, petitioner lacks an adequate alternative legal channel because the Board can't provide the relief she seeks.

iii. Issuance of the Writ is Warranted Given the Circumstances

"[I]t is important to remember that issuance of the writ is in large part a matter of discretion with the court to which the petition is addressed."²³³ This case contains plenty of extraordinary—if not unique—circumstances we have discussed extensively in this order,²³⁴ Most recently relevant, per VA's Office of the Inspector General, we know that VA "will take corrective actions on claims determined to have been improperly denied for the presence of [OHI] after April 8, 2016" (the date Staab issued) and "anticipate[] implementation by late 2019."²³⁵ To be clear, this audit didn't address the questions we confront in this case regarding § 17.1005(a)(5)'s validity. The audit unearthed and corrected issues above and beyond those we discuss here. Though the report's corrective actions aren't relevant on the surface, they do impact this case because affected veterans will likely get caught up in "readjudications" that will only perpetuate the errors of law we address in this order. Fortunately, we have the power and opportunity to intervene now to prevent enormous bureaucratic waste that would result from VA's continued erroneous adjudications and communications, so we will. We hold that issuance of the writ is warranted.

C. Remedy

Having determined that the regulation is invalid, the Court must now determine what relief is appropriate to remedy the classwide harm. The petitioners initially asked the Court to declare 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5) invalid because it is contrary to 38 U.S.C. § 1725(c)(4)(D); invalidate the Secretary's decisions made under § 17.1005(a)(5) to the extent they denied reimbursement to Wolfe Class members for medical expenses deemed deductibles or coinsurance; order the Secretary to readjudicate these reimbursement claims under section 1725(c)(4)(D)'s proper interpretation; and order such other relief as may be appropriate in the interest of justice and in aid of the Court's jurisdiction.²³⁶ The Court will order the Secretary to do all of that plus other relief that gets at the "corrective letters."

²³¹ Resp't's Resp. to Am. Pet. at 11-13.

²³² See 38 U.S.C. § 7104(c) ("The Board shall be bound in its decisions by the regulations of the Department")

²³⁶ Am. Pet. at 3-4.

We can't allow VA to send out "corrective" notices that contain the following language: "It is important to note that VA has no legal authority to pay a Veteran's cost shares, deductibles, or copayments associated with their other health insurance."²³⁷ Because § 17.1005(a)(5) is invalid, and this statement is clearly derived from § 17.1005(a)(5), it's also an incorrect interpretation of section 1725. Therefore, we'll also order the Secretary to stop issuing the Category A and C letters and to strike the problematic language we've identified in this paragraph. In addition, the Secretary must prepare a plan to correct the incorrect notices that have already been sent.

One final note. As for the readjudications' logistics, the Secretary stated he would process Category A and C claims under the AMA and Category B claims as Legacy appeals.²³⁸ However, he seems to ignore his own regulation, 38 C.F.R. § 3.2400, which delineates the standard for determining under which system—Legacy or AMA—to adjudicate a claim.²³⁹ On remand, the Secretary should look closely at this issue along with the others to ensure compliance with both statute and regulation.

Upon consideration of the foregoing, it is ORDERED that the Wolfe Class is certified as defined here: "All claimants whose claims for reimbursement of emergency medical expenses incurred at non-VA facilities VA has already denied or will deny, in whole or in part, on the ground that the expenses are part of the deductible or coinsurance payments for which the veteran was responsible." It is further ORDERED that Mark B. Blocker, Esq., of Sidley Austin LLP, and Barton F. Stichman, Esq., of the National Veterans Legal Services Program, are appointed as class counsel. It is further

ORDERED that 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5) is invalid because it is contrary to 38 U.S.C. § 1725. It is further ORDERED that the Secretary's decisions made under § 17.1005(a)(5), to the extent they denied reimbursement to Wolfe Class members for medical expenses deemed deductibles or coinsurance, in whole or in part, are invalid. It is further ORDERED that Secretary must readjudicate these reimbursement claims under section 1725's proper interpretation. It is further ORDERED the Secretary stop sending its corrective letters immediately because they contain incorrect statements of what the law is, namely: "It is important to note that VA has no legal authority to pay a Veteran's cost shares, deductibles, or copayments associated with their other health insurance." And it is further ORDERED that within 45 days of the date of the order the Secretary prepare and submit to the Court for approval a plan for providing notice to veterans affected by the provision of notice that contained an incorrect statement of the law concerning reimbursement of costs for non-VA emergency care.

DATED: September 9, 2019

PER CURIAM.

FALVEY, Judge, dissenting: I respectfully dissent from my colleagues' decision to grant mandamus relief. I would deny Ms. Wolfe's petition because her requested mandamus relief is not in aid of our appellate jurisdiction.²⁴⁰ Nor does she demonstrate an indisputable right to a writ. And, our statutorily prescribed appeals process provides her with adequate alternative means to obtain her desired relief. Though I will focus my analysis on Ms. Wolfe, I would, for the same reasons, deny mandamus relief for the Wolfe class.

Admittedly, we have authority under the AWA to "issue all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of [our] jurisdiction[] and agreeable to the usages and principles of law." 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a); see also Monk v. Shulkin, 855 F.3d 1312, 1318 (Fed. Cir. 2017) ("The [AWA] unquestionably applies in the Veterans Court."). But "[t]he remedy of mandamus is a drastic one, to be invoked only in extraordinary situations." Kerr v. U.S. Dist. Court, 426 U.S. 394, 402 (1976). Mandamus relief is not appropriate unless three conditions are met: (1) The petitioner must demonstrate a clear and indisputable right to the writ; (2) the petitioner must demonstrate the lack of adequate alternative means to obtain the desired relief, thus ensuring that the writ is not used as a substitute for the appeals process; and (3) the Court must be convinced, given the circumstances, that issuance of the writ is warranted. Cheney v. U.S. Dist. Court, 542 U.S. 367, 380-81 (2004). Because Ms. Wolfe's petition is not in aid of our jurisdiction and does not meet the requirements for a writ, the Court should not grant mandamus relief.

1. Not in Aid of our Jurisdiction

The AWA authorizes us to issue only those writs that are in aid of our appellate jurisdiction. 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a). This is because the AWA is not an independent grant of jurisdictional authority. Roche v. Evaporated Milk Ass'n, 319 U.S. 21, 26 (1943). The AWA does not expand a court's jurisdiction. Cox v. West, 149 F.3d 1360, 1363 (Fed. Cir. 1998). Rather, it is "a residual source of authority" that allows us to protect our statutorily prescribed jurisdiction. Pennsylvania Bureau of Corr. v. U.S. Marshals Serv., 474 U.S. 34, 43 (1985). "It permits federal courts to fill gaps in their judicial power where those gaps would thwart the otherwise proper exercise of their jurisdiction." Monk, 855 F.3d at 1318. Or it "remove[s] obstacles to an appeal." Roche, 319 U.S. at 26. But the AWA does not create jurisdiction where it does not already lie. In re Tennant, 359 F.3d 523, 530 (D.C. Cir. 2004) ("[M]andamus would otherwise be an original action, not in aid of appellate jurisdiction.").

The party seeking a writ therefore must show "that the action sought by mandamus is within the court's statutorily defined subject matter jurisdiction." In re Matter of Wick, 40 F.3d 367, 372-73 (Fed. Cir. 1994). Our jurisdiction is defined by statute. Burris v. Wilkie, 888 F.3d 1352, 1357 (Fed. Cir. 2018). In 38 U.S.C. § 7252, Congress granted us appellate jurisdiction over final Board decisions. That statute states that we have "exclusive jurisdiction to review decisions of the Board" and that our review must be "on the record of proceedings before the Secretary and the Board." It further provides that our review of final Board decisions is "limited by the scope provided in section 7261." Section 7261 lists actions to take and standards to apply during our appellate review. Of relevance here, the statute states that we may "decide all relevant questions of law," "interpret . . . regulatory provisions," and "compel action of the Secretary unlawfully withheld or unreasonably delayed." 38 U.S.C. § 7261(a); see also Martin v. O'Rourke, 891 F.3d 1338, 1343 (Fed. Cir. 2018) (section 7261 "provides the standards the . . . Court must use when reviewing actions of the Secretary"). Taken together, section 7252 and 7261 allow us to decide questions of law and compel unlawfully withheld secretarial action, among other things, in the context of reviewing final Board decisions.

We thus may grant a petition for writ of mandamus when the relief sought has some sort of relationship to a final Board decision over which we could exercise jurisdiction. See Cox, 149 F.3d at 1364-66 (addressing whether the appellant's fee agreement dispute could lead to a final Board decision such that a writ of mandamus would be appropriate). But Ms. Wolfe's petition lacks such a connection. She does not contend that the Secretary is refusing to process her claim, unreasonably delaying its adjudication, or performing any other action that would prevent her dispute from making its way to our Court.²⁴¹ She doesn't want us to remove an obstacle. Instead, she wants to skip the appeals process entirely and bring her regulatory challenge directly to the Court.

She asks the Court to directly determine the validity of § 17.1005(a)(5) and find, in the first instance, that VA incorrectly denied reimbursement under that regulation. Granting her requested relief would thwart, not aid, our appellate jurisdiction. Because granting Ms. Wolfe's petition could not lead to a final Board decision reviewable by this Court, and would, in fact, abrogate the need for such a decision, her requests for relief are not in aid of our jurisdiction, and her petition must be denied. Am. Legion v. Nicholson, 21 Vet.App. 1, 7 (2007); Yi v. Principi, 15 Vet.App. 265, 267 (2001) ("[T]he Court's jurisdiction to issue the order sought by the petitioner depends upon whether the Court would have jurisdiction to review the final Board decision that would issue pursuant to that order.").

The majority concludes that Ms. Wolfe's requests for relief are in aid of our jurisdiction for two reasons. First, because "the regulation itself risks frustrating the exercise of our statutorily granted jurisdiction over Board decisions." See ante at 16. And second, because the letters notifying claimants they wouldn't be reimbursed for "cost-sharing" devices under the regulation could discourage claimants from appealing. Id. But, this is true of everyone who has a disagreement with any regulation promulgated by the Secretary. Put another way, the majority says that we should issue an extraordinary writ whenever a claimant disagrees with a VA regulation and gets a letter telling the claimant he or she was denied based on that regulation.

I simply do not agree. Merely citing a regulation that the petitioner believes is invalid is not enough to warrant a writ of mandamus. Many decisions in the VA system turn on the applicability or interpretation of a VA regulation, and "[t]he remedy of mandamus is a drastic one, to be invoked only in extraordinary situations." Kerr, 426 U.S. at 402. Moreover, informing claimants that their claims have been denied under § 17.1005(a)(5) is not the functional equivalent of a refusal to act. The Secretary is required by law to inform a claimant of the bases on which VA has denied her claim. 38 U.S.C. § 5104(b). Rather than creating a chilling effect, providing a claimant the reason for a VA denial helps the claimant appeal a wrongful decision.

Nor do I agree with the majority that we have the authority to grant Ms. Wolfe's request for direct regulatory review without the prospect of a final Board decision merely because we have prospective jurisdiction over her claim. Our AWA authority to act in cases within our prospective jurisdiction is not that unfettered. It is tied to the exercise of our actual appellate jurisdiction: we have authority under the AWA to act in cases potentially within our jurisdiction when our action is "in aid of the appellate jurisdiction which might otherwise be defeated." F.T.C. v. Dean Foods Co., 384 U.S. 597, 603 (1966); see also McClellan v. Carland, 217 U.S. 268, 280 (1910) ("We think it the true rule that where a case is within the appellate jurisdiction of the higher court a writ may issue in aid of the appellate jurisdiction which might otherwise be defeated."). Otherwise, "[t]he mandamus would . . . be an original claim, not in aid of appellate jurisdiction." In re Tennant, 359 F.3d at 530.

²⁴¹ The majority notes that a November 20, 2018, letter from the Secretary states that Ms. Wolfe's appeal was "closed." Ante at 10. If this letter showed the Secretary's refusal to process Ms. Wolfe's appeal, thus foreclosing the possibility of a final Board decision addressing the denial of reimbursement, the AWA would give us the authority to remove this obstacle to our appellate jurisdiction. See Roche, 319 U.S. at 26. But in her amended petition Ms. Wolfe does not ask us to take this action. Rather, she maintains that her appeal to the Board is being processed and that she is "continu[ing] to pursue her direct appeal." Am. Pet. at 10 n.2.

Ms. Wolfe's status as a prospective appellant allows us to use our mandamus power only if her requested relief were related to bringing her case within our appellate jurisdiction. But Ms. Wolfe's petition does not request such relief. Instead, she asks us to rule in the first instance that § 17.1005(a)(5) is invalid and that the Secretary wrongfully denied reimbursement under that regulation. In essence, she requests we exercise original jurisdiction over regional office denials of reimbursement under § 17.1005(a)(5), rather than act in aid of our appellate jurisdiction over final Board decisions. The AWA does not authorize us to act in these circumstances. Mandamus in support of prospective jurisdiction, "like any exercise of appellate jurisdiction, [i]s limited to review of 'proceedings in a cause already instituted.'" In re Tennant, 359 F.3d at 530 (quoting Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. (1 Cranch) 137, 175-76 (1803)).

Also, I do not find that the cases cited by the majority support granting a petition that would effectively deprive the Court of our appellate jurisdiction over a final Board decision. Each of the cases cited by the majority are tied to our actual or prospective appellate jurisdiction, particularly those addressing unreasonable agency delay. As we explained in Erspramer v. Derwinski, we may exercise our mandamus authority to address "inadvertent or intentional administrative delay" because such delay "directly and adversely effects the potential and prospective appellate jurisdiction of this court." 1 Vet.App. 3, 9 (1990). No case supports the majority's assertion that we may exercise our mandamus power in a case where a petitioner's case is not within our actual jurisdiction and granting the petition would remove the case from our prospective jurisdiction. Rather, the AWA "extends to the potential jurisdiction of the appellate court where an appeal is not then pending but may be later perfected." See F.T.C., 384 U.S. at 603 (emphasis added).

I do not read either Monk or Martin as providing us with the authority to act in the absence of an actual or prospective Board decision. Monk dealt with the parties' complaint that they were not able to obtain a Board decision because of VA's continual delays. Martin explained that "[b]ecause the statutory obligation of a Court of Appeals to review on the merits may be defeated by an agency that fails to resolve disputes, a Circuit Court may resolve claims of unreasonable delay in order to protect its future jurisdiction." Martin, 891 F.3d at 1342-43 (citing Telecomms. Research & Action Ctr. v. FCC, 750 F.2d 70, 76 (D.C. Cir. 1984)). Neither case addressed whether the Court could issue a petition in a case like this one, where Ms. Wolfe does not intend to seek a Board decision before requesting that the Court review the merits of VA's denial of her claim. Furthermore, though the majority states that Monk and Martin "seemed to assume" that section 7261 provides the Court with authority to address the Secretary's actions in the absence of an actual or potential Board decision, ante at 17, neither case so held. Nor could they have done so, as the Federal Circuit is bound by statute, and section 7261 does not provide an independent grant of jurisdictional authority but, rather, defines the scope of our section 7252 jurisdiction to review final Board decisions.

2. No Clear and Undisputable Right to a Writ

Ms. Wolfe contends that she is entitled to a writ because 38 C.F.R. § 17.1005(a)(5) conflicts with the plain language of 38 U.S.C. § 1725(c)(4)(d) and runs afoul of Staab. But the regulation at issue in this case is not the one invalidated in Staab. The Secretary amended § 17.1005(a)(5) in response to Staab and he contends that the amended regulation is both a valid interpretation of § 1725(c)(4)(d) and consistent with his authority to "delineate the circumstances under which such payments may be made." 38 U.S.C. § 1725(c)(1)(B).

The Secretary makes a good argument that the amended § 17.1005(a)(5) is a permissible construction of section 1725. The regulation states that that "VA will not reimburse a veteran under this section for any copayment, deductible, coinsurance, or similar payment that the veteran owes the third party or is obligated to pay under a health-plan contract." This language mirrors the language of section 1725(c)(4)(D), except for the addition of "deductible, coinsurance." The Secretary argues that the addition of these terms is consistent with the statute because "deductibles and coinsurance are also cost-sharing tools used in the health insurance industry and, as such, share the same basic function or purpose as copayments." Secretary's Response to Am. Pet. at 17. He argues that the term "cost sharing" is an umbrella term that captures deductibles, coinsurance, copayments, and all other similar charges. And he points out that Ms. Wolfe's interpretation would read out the term "similar payment" from the statute because "if deductibles and coinsurance are not 'similar payment[s]' to copayments . . . , VA is not aware of any other form of payment that would be." Id. at 19.

It may be that Ms. Wolfe is correct and the new regulation is invalid for the same reasons invalidating the regulation in Staab. But she is not clearly and indisputably correct. The new regulation and the Secretary's justification for it have not yet been the subject of a decision by our Court. At the very least, the Secretary's reasoned and persuasive statutory-interpretation argument shows that the invalidity of § 17.1005(a)(5) is not a foregone conclusion. Because there is no clear and undisputable right to a writ of mandamus, I would deny her petition.

3. Adequate Alternative Means To Obtain the Requested Relief

We also should deny Ms. Wolfe's petition because the statutory appeals process provides her with adequate means to obtain her desired relief. "Ordinarily mandamus may not be resorted to as a mode of review where a statutory method of appeal has been prescribed or to review an appealable decision of record." Roche, 319 U.S. at 27-28. Rather, a successful petitioner "must demonstrate the lack of adequate alternative means to obtain the desired relief, thus ensuring that the writ is not used as a substitute for the appeals process." Cheney, 542 U.S. at 380-81 (2004).

Although Ms. Wolfe asks the Court to review the validity of § 17.1005(a)(5) and reverse VA decisions that have denied benefits under that regulation, she concedes that she is currently in the process of obtaining a Board decision that addresses these issues. The regional office has denied her claim for reimbursement, she has filed a Notice of Disagreement with that decision, and she is awaiting a Statement of the Case that will allow her to perfect her appeal to the Board. Am. Pet. at 10 n.2 (stating Ms. Wolfe's belief that her appeal remains open and pending and that she "will continue to pursue her direct appeal" to the Board).

Ms. Wolfe seeks to use mandamus as a substitute for this appellate process. She would like us to issue a writ in lieu of her completing the statutorily prescribed procedure of appealing a Board decision because it takes too long and, in any event, the Board is obliged to apply VA regulations. But "extraordinary writs cannot be used as substitutes for appeals, even though hardship may result from delay and perhaps unnecessary trial." Lamb v. Principi, 284 F.3d 1378, 1384 (Fed. Cir. 2002) (quoting Bankers Life & Cas. Co. v. Holland, 346 U.S. 379 (1953)). The AWA does not authorize us to "issue ad hoc writs whenever compliance with statutory procedures appears inconvenient or less appropriate." Pennsylvania Bureau of Corr., 474 U.S. at 43. Although "hardship is imposed on parties who are compelled to await the correction of an alleged error at an interlocutory stage by an appeal from a final judgment, . . . such hardship does not necessarily justify resort to certiorari." U.S. Alkali Exp. Ass'n v. United States, 325 U.S. 196, 202 (1945).

This is particularly true here, where Congress has explicitly conditioned our jurisdiction on a final decision of the Board. As the Supreme Court explained in Roche, when Congress has determined that a court of appeals has jurisdiction over final decisions, it is not appropriate to issue a writ of mandamus to circumvent that jurisdictional requirement. 319 U.S. at 29. "Where the appeal statutes establish the conditions of appellate review an appellate court cannot rightly exercise its discretion to issue a writ whose only effect would be to avoid those conditions." Id. at 30. Even when obtaining a final decision from the adjudicator below would be costly and inconvenient, this "inconvenience is one which we must take it Congress contemplated in providing that only final judgments should be reviewable." Id.

Finally, I note that a Board decision addressing veterans' claims could find facts in the first instance and develop a record that the Court could base its review on. See 38 U.S.C. § 7252(b) ("Review in the Court shall be on the record of proceedings before the Secretary and the Board."); Hensley v. West, 212 F.3d 1255, 1263 (Fed. Cir. 2000) ("[A]ppellate tribunals are not appropriate fora for initial fact finding.").

The drastic remedy of mandamus is properly exercised when certain, well established criteria are met. Because Ms. Wolfe's petition is not in aid of our jurisdiction, she lacks an undisputable right to a writ, and there are adequate alternative means to obtain her desired relief, she does not meet the criteria for issuance of a writ of mandamus. And because she is not entitled to a writ, neither is the class. I therefore would deny her petition and that of the Wolfe class.
